PERU'S PRESIDENT QUILTS FOLLOWING THREATS OF NAVY

Colonel Sanchez Cerro Resigns Provisional Presidency To Prevent Further Bloodshed.

NEW JUNTA HEADED BY RICARDO ELIAS

Maritime Chiefs Threatened To Withdraw Support if Government Persisted in Fight.

LIMA, Peru, March 1.—(AP)—The Peruvian navy, following the lead of revolting army garrisons in the north and south, late today forced the resignation of Provisional President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro and a new government was set up in a few hours.

The new junta is headed by Ricardo Leoncio Elias, chief justice of the supreme court, as provisional president. Other members are: Captain Alejandro G. Vences, commander-in-chief of the navy, and Colonel Manuel Ruiz Bravo, chief of the army general staff.

Immediately the three junta officials moved to open communications with southern rebel forces at Arequipa and northern insurgents in the vicinity of Piura, seeking to end what has been verging on civil war for more than a week.

Today's events followed the publication in morning papers of an ultimatum by the navy, which called upon the president to resign and declared that ships loaded with government troops to attack the northern and southern rebels had been held up. It was signed by Captain Vences, one of the members of the new junta.

This afternoon the Sanchez Cerro government decided to invite representatives from all sections of the national life to attend a meeting at the government palace at 3 p. m. and an announcement was made that military operations had been suspended pending the outcome of this conference.

The presiding officer was Monsignor Mariano Holguin, apostolic administrator and bishop of Arequipa.

Sanchez Cerro announced the resignation of himself and all the cabinet, then retired to the Bolivar hotel. The conference remained in session until the new government had been established.

Crowds gathered in front of the hotel and cheered the retiring president.

Naval vessels kept steam up in the harbor, anchored off the port of Callao, on island of San Lorenzo, while army transports which had left yesterday to carry troops southward were halted and also remained off San Lorenzo.

Before it was known that Sanchez Cerro had resigned crowds gathered in front of the Callao Prefecture building, acclaiming the provisional president and requesting arms to fight the revolutionaries. Tension relaxed somewhat, however, after the resignation.

Ft. Benning Sergeant Stabbed to Death
COLUMBUS, Ga., March 1.—(AP)—Sergeant Edgar S. Folsom, of the twenty-ninth infantry, Ft. Benning, was dead here today, from knife wounds, and police said O. F. Smith had confessed slaying at Folsom late last night during an altercation alleged to have involved the soldier and Smith's wife.

Smith was held in the city jail today on a charge of murder, and Mrs. Smith was detained as a material witness.

Would-Be King

BUSINESS BETTER, SURVEY DISCLOSES

Hoover's Board Finds General Optimism in American Industry.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—(AP)—An improving trend in the condition of American business was disclosed today by Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the national business survey conference appointed by President Hoover.

In a report on the mid-winter economic status of the United States, Barnes saw a number of optimistic signs. Outstanding features of the report were summarized as follows:

"Recurring demonstration that industry generally has attained a new adjustment of stocks, production and marketing in which even a moderate expansion in demand will have immediate results; improvement in the general business; and a number of signs, such as more dairy products.

"Clear indication that the volume of savings in their various forms has been large and is still mounting."

Barnes said his summary was based on reports from the chief executives of American business; he added, they had been accompanied "almost uniformly by expressions of confidence and energy which are apparently justified."

Discussing international conditions, Barnes said, "Repeated evidences of improved conditions are recorded."

At the same time, Barnes said, "The long-term capital market over the past 2-1/2 months has reflected an improved condition."

"Only lately," he added, had the

DEADLOCK LOOMS ON PLANS TO RAISE MONEY FOR STATE

Ninth Week Begins Today With Interest Focused on Highway Diversion Discount Impasse.

BY R. E. POWELL.

After 55 days of urging, protesting and log-rolling, an extraordinary session of the general assembly of Georgia will begin its ninth consecutive week this morning with its major interest apparently focused on whether a legislative minority, composed chiefly of a highway diversion bloc in the senate and Governor Hardman, or a preponderant house majority and Governor-elect Russell, shall control the enactment of legislation to meet unpaid appropriations and mounting interest charges on them.

Summoned here to provide funds with which to check a threatened emergency at the state sanitarium and at the Alton tubercular hospital, the house, after six weeks of debating one measure and another, voted 146 to 50 for the Battle-Allen bill to divert Western & Atlantic railroad rentals for 10 years and apportion the $3,400,000 proceeds on a pro rata basis to the suffering institutions and the common schools.

For two weeks this measure has been in the senate, about of opposition led by Senators Lankford and Redwine, and is now on the calendar for its final reading on Tuesday morning. It is possible, under the parliamentary status gained for the bill through the efforts of W. Cecil Neill, president of the senate, to be brought to a vote any time after it is placed before the senate Tuesday.

Hardman Renews Appeal. Into a situation which, several times, has seemed about to reach a deadlock, Governor-elect Russell Saturday, for the third time, threw the weight of his office against the diversion bill, which he is selling the rentals—already hypothecated until 1933—and again renewed a veiled plea for the assembly to divert the funds to the common schools.

From the outset of the special session, Governor-elect Russell has been inclined to leave the problem of providing the state with revenue to the legislature itself without presuming upon the influence of the office he assumes in June. His political friends, however, in the legislature and out of it have been diligent in support of the Battle-Allen bill, a circumstance which has generally attracted the highly favorable vote the discount bill received in the house.

Under the constitution, any measure to raise revenue, whether by levying new and additional taxes, or by pledging the credit of the state must originate in the house. Even a diversion bill, which is a financial measure, would have to be started in the lower branch if it met the test of the courts. One indirect diversion bill, offered in the house, mettered out the vote last night against the discount bill.

State debts amounting to $6,200,000, representing appropriations made to the common schools and the institutions by legislatures of 1927 and 1929, formed one of the principal issues in last fall's gubernatorial campaign. Barnes said, "The long-term capital market over the past 2-1/2 months has reflected an improved condition."

"Only lately," he added, had the

14 Anti-Soviet Conspirators Placed on Trial in Moscow

Proceedings Marked by the Spectacular as the Soviet Union Tries Men Once High in Official Positions.

BY CHARLES MALMUTH.

MOSCOW, March 1.—(UP)—The spectacular trial of 14 men, confessed interventionist plotters against the soviet state, began this evening in the hall of nobles.

For the second time within recent months, the government took stern measures for the elimination of men long trusted in high administrative posts. In a setting in the spacious hall of nobles, made familiar by the first interventionist trial last autumn, the prosecution of the defendants—all economists, bankers or officials serving the government—began at 6:20.

Nicholas Krylenko, pugnacious litigator, was on hand with documents which he intimated would link former German government authorities with the interventionist plot. Again there were the great amplifiers and microphones carrying the testimony to the four corners of the hall, as well as the French with their brilliant illumination; the radio amplifiers and microphones carrying the testimony to the four corners of the hall, as well as the French with their brilliant illumination; the radio amplifiers and microphones carrying the testimony to the four corners of the hall, as well as the French with their brilliant illumination.

The hall was packed with the so-called "shock brigade" workers. They are specially privileged men and women who are used in organizing factories and in special jobs anywhere in the country.

Krylenko, the prosecutor, said he intended to call Professor Leonid Hamzin and Victor Karichev, two of the eight engineers convicted in the first trial.

Proposed study of a measure designed to abolish ad valorem taxes in Atlanta and substitute an income tax, in an effort to solve the borough's fiscal problem, Sunday night gained the support of Councilman Claude L. Barnwell, chairman of the tax committee and one of the administration's recognized leaders.

Councilman John A. White Saturday declared he would offer such a measure to council this afternoon and ask that the matter be sent to a special committee composed of Mayor James L. Key, Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, chairman of the finance committee; Councilman R. Barnwell; B. Graham West, city comptroller, and one of the three tax assessors.

The plan will call for a change in the borough charter, but any solution of the financial problems which the borough is beset would require similar action. It was pointed out by Mr. White and others believe that the measure could be so applied as not to increase the tax burden on any one and at the same time procure all needed revenue by placing the names of hundreds who are not paying any of the cost of the government on the tax lists.

Sunday Mr. White pointed out that there could be no real objection to abolition of the ad valorem tax because the county would still make such a levy. The only possible objection, he said, would be that the levying powers of the borough are based on the value of the real property, but this could be changed at the same time the charter is changed to permit the income levy.

If the plan were adopted for Atlanta it would not affect the income of the state and county in any respect as the county now collects all state and county taxes irrespective of the levies made by the borough, Mr. White said.

Mr. Millican previously stated that he favored a thorough study of the plan.

"I feel that the matter should be

CONGRESS HEADS ABANDON HOPES FOR MORE BILLS

Time Remaining Too Short To Secure Passage of Further General Legislation, Leaders Hold.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—(AP)—Congressional leaders today abandoned hope for enactment of any other general legislation before adjournment in the face of a prospective veto from President Hoover on the Muscle Shoals bill.

The president's statement yesterday characterizing the Norris measure for government operation of the Muscle Shoals power and nitrate plant as "a political symbol" was accepted on Capitol Hill as foreshadowing a veto.

With only two and a half days remaining Republican Leader Watson conceded today it would be next to impossible to secure action on anything controversial.

He will press tomorrow for senate adoption of the $100,000,000 second deficiency bill which Chairman Jones, of the appropriations committee, is ready to report.

Then, if Mr. Hoover vetoes the Muscle Shoals bill it will go first to the senate. The subsequent row over this is expected to consume what time is left of the dying congress. Leaders believed the veto would be sustained if brought to a vote.

Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, sponsor of the Muscle Shoals legislation providing for government operation of the power plant, today chided the president for his failure to announce a decision.

In reply to Mr. Hoover, the Nebraska senator said:

"The president in his statement says: 'This happens to be an engineering project.' The president being an engineer, it would seem he would have no difficulty in solving the problem and therefore it is rather surprising to learn from his statement that he is referring the matter to the heads of departments, none of whom are engineers."

"The great engineer is seeking advice on an engineering project from those who are not engineers. Kansas those who are not engineers tell the engineer what to do with an engineering project," the engineer will know what to do with an engineering project."

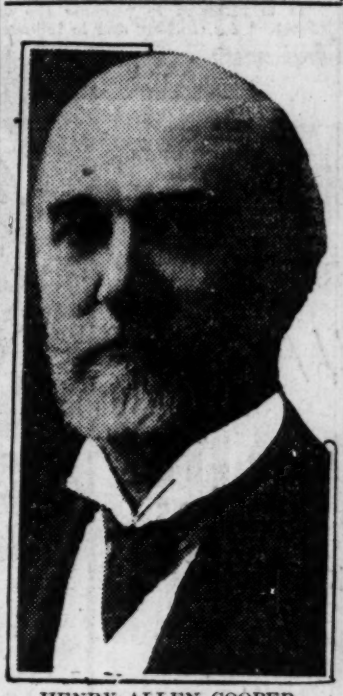

"It reminds me of the New England country justice who at the close of a law suit said he would take it under advisement for three days, at which time he would render judgment for the plaintiff."

Senator Herbert, republican, Rhode Island, will renew his effort in the senate tomorrow to obtain action on the Vestal copyright bill. It already has been approved by the house, but with stiff senate opposition manifest time Tuesday for enactment is seen.

A last-minute effort for an immigration bill will be attempted tomorrow in the house. If the measure proposed to reduce by 50 per cent present immigration quotas gets through the house, friends of the legislation will make a drive for it in the senate.

Senator Capper, republican, Kansas has put the senate on notice he will attempt to get action on his bill restricting foreign oil imports, but no change for enactment of that legislation is seen in the closing wrangle.

Dies at Capital

HENRY ALLEN COOPER, 80, PASSES AT CAPITAL

Wisconsin Representative Was Oldest in House in Point of Service.

BY CECIL B. DICKSON.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—(AP)—Representative Henry Allen Cooper, of Wisconsin, is dead.

Oldest house member in point of service, the 80-year-old republican progressive died at his hotel here early today as he rounded out 36 years of public life. He was born in his seat in the coming congress.

The tall, upright, white-haired and bearded "dean of the house" as he was termed by his colleagues, attended a prolonged and heated house session last night and retired late complaining of feeling ill. Death came a few hours later with his wife at his bedside.

Representative Cooper had suffered injuries from a fall at his home in Racine last summer and his health had been poor ever since. He had also been concerned over the health of his wife, who recently underwent a serious operation. His death was attributed to acute indigestion.

The Wisconsin member represented the first district. He entered the house in 1907 and served in 1908. For one term, his service was broken. He was defeated for re-election to the 69th congress because he voted against entering the World War along with 50 others.

Throughout his career he was an ardent supporter of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin. In 1923 the La Follette group delayed three days the election of Frederick H. Gillett, of Massachusetts, as speaker, by urging the selection of Cooper.

At the 1924 republican convention in Cleveland he sponsored several plans of the La Follette group for the 1924 platform. Later he sided with La Follette in his presidential campaign.

Cooper was with Theodore Roosevelt in Milwaukee in 1912 when an attempt was made to assassinate the former president, then running for another term.

Speaker Longworth plans to appoint a house-committee tomorrow to accompany the body to Racine, where it will lie in state. The funeral party will leave Wednesday afternoon and the house will recess tomorrow out of respect to the veteran legislator.

ACCORD EXPECTED TO PREVENT RACE OF FRANCE, ITALY

Briand and Dumont Agree To Proposition Submitted by Henderson and Alexander.

OFFICIAL APPROVAL NEEDED FOR PLAN

Ratification by British, French and Italian Governments Necessary To Complete Accord.

PARIS, March 1.—(AP)—Aristide Briand and Charles Dumont, naval minister, today accepted the proposition for a naval accord which Arthur Henderson, British foreign minister, and A. V. Alexander, first lord of the British admiralty, brought from Rome.

Thus an agreement is tentatively reached by representatives of France, England and Italy for settlement of naval problems left over by the London conference last year. The question, however, must be submitted to the governments of all three countries for ratification.

The British delegates reached Paris at 3:25 p. m., today. For several days they had conferred with Italian naval officials, the conversations resulting in the acceptance of the tentative accord which is hoped to remove the danger of a naval pact between France and Italy.

Foreign Minister Briand greeted the British ministers at the railroad and the entire party proceeded to the ministry of foreign affairs where the British plenipotentiaries acquainted Briand and Dumont with the results of their negotiations in Rome. Briand insisted that tea be served to the visitors before proceeding with the regular business.

An official communique issued after the meeting said:

"Henderson and Alexander made Briand and Dumont acquainted with the rest of the conversations they had in Rome. After their conference both ministers agreed that the British plenipotentiaries acquainted Briand and Dumont with the results of their negotiations in Rome. Briand insisted that tea be served to the visitors before proceeding with the regular business."

"We are happy to inform you that we are in entire accord with you upon arrangements negotiated in Rome for settlement of questions concerning limitation of naval armaments left pending by the treaty of London. We are prepared to recommend it to approval of our governments and other governments."

"The text of the agreement will be published in the countries involved, and our best wishes for yourself and your country. (Signed) Arthur Henderson and Aristide Briand."

ASHTON A. PADGETT, 36, DIES AT HOSPITAL HERE

Ashton A. Padgett, 36-year-old World War veteran, died at a local hospital early Sunday after an illness of three weeks. For the last several years he had been in the real estate business.

Mr. Padgett was born in Atlanta and lived here all of his life. During the war he served in the air corps, being stationed most of the time at Ithaca, N. Y. He was a member of the Gate City lodge and the Ponce de Leon Baptist church.

He is survived by his mother, two sisters, Mrs. C. V. Weathers, Jr., and Mrs. A. F. Hammond, and four brothers, Hardy, Ben and Marsh Padgett, of Atlanta, and Frank Padgett, of Jackson, Miss.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Spring Hill chapel of the Patterson company. Dr. Luther Rice Christie and Dr. Louis D. Newton will officiate. The burial will be in West View cemetery.

MEMPHIS TO HOLD COTTON CARNIVAL

Memphis, Tenn., March 1.—(AP)—The Memphis Cotton Carnival will begin tomorrow.

Attended by princes and princesses in costumes of the old south, King Cotton and his queen will mount their throne in ceremonies starting a three-day succession of street carnivals, style shows and balls.

It is intended to promote the use of cotton for clothing and in industry.

Treasury Financing Totaling $1,400,000,000 Announced

WASHINGTON, March 1.—(UP)—Treasury financing totaling $1,400,000,000 was announced today by Secretary Mellon. Of this huge offering, one of the largest since the war, $1,109,000,000 is to refund outstanding treasury certificates which are redeemable March 15. The remaining $291,000,000 is to meet demands under the new veterans' loan bill for the next three months.

There was some surprise at the size of the offering. Undersecretary of Treasury Ogden L. Mills told the senate finance committee last week the treasury would have to issue $1,000,000,000 of securities March 15 if the loan bill became law.

Veterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines said today banks throughout the country can loan money to veterans on their adjusted compensation certificates. The more banks which extend loans, Hines said, "the sooner will the present problem of veterans' loans be met." He said also that veterans can obtain the money from banks in their home communities, instead of applying to veterans' regional offices.

The treasury offerings were divided into three blocks, a $500,000,000 bond issue starting March 15 and bearing interest for 12 years at 3-8 per cent, a $300,000,000 six-month certificate issue starting March 15 at 1-2 per cent, and a $900,000,000 12-month certificate issue paying interest at 2 per cent.

Mellon announced the treasury bonds will be redeemable by the treasury at its option on or after March 15, 1941, although they will not mature until 1942. The remaining $291,000,000 will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000.

The certificates will be exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation, except inheritance and estate taxes. The bonds will be exempt from all federal taxation now or hereafter imposed.

On March 15, the treasury has coming due $1,109,000,000 of 3-1/2 per cent treasury notes which it called for redemption about six months ago. About $300,000,000 in interest on the public debt is due then.

The net result of the refunding at a slightly lower interest rate, will mean a saving to the government of several hundred million dollars.

The new money being borrowed by the treasury is the $291,000,000 being offered in excess of the $1,109,000,000 being retired. In June, it is probable the treasury will borrow $400,000,000 additional to meet the veterans' loan. On March 15, the treasury will receive the first installment on the 1931 income tax payments, expected to aggregate less than $500,000,000, a decrease of $100,000,000 from 1930 owing to business depression.

All previous treasury estimates have indicated the veterans' bureau would require $400,000,000 this month and another $400,000,000 in June. Mills said the treasury would borrow $500,000,000 in its March financing for this purpose, but Mellon's announced program has shaved this to $291,000,000.

It is presumed the treasury will use the income tax payments to meet the balance, if any, over the $291,000,000.

ARMED TRIO ROBS
BUS PASSENGERS
PORTSMOUTH, Ohio, March 1.—(AP)—Three men, armed with revolvers, but unarmed, held up 22 passengers and two drivers on a Blue and Grey bus at George postoffice, seven miles north of here, early today and escaped in an automobile with $578.

The only woman passenger, Ann Graham, Columbus, placed a diamond ring in her mouth, dropped her purse to the floor and kept her feet over it. She saved both.

The passengers robbed included it. Scott Holley, Watugh, Tenn., who lost $250 and Mitchell Humphreys, Watugh, Tenn., $24.

DECLARATIONS IN LEA
SUITS TO BE MADE
ATLANTA, Tenn., March 1.—(AP)—Representing Colonel Luke Lea, Nashville publisher, Captain Richard N. Ivins will file declarations in the 10 separate suits for libel instituted by Colonel Lea against W. E. Neil, carrier, and the News-Sentinel, of Knoxville, principal, when circuit court convenes here tomorrow.

Summons in the suits, aggregating $1,000,000 were filed several weeks ago. Declarations to be filed tomorrow, Captain Ivins said, will enumerate 10 specific instances of criminal libel. During the week he will also file at Madisonville, declaration in the suit instituted by Colonel Lea against Judge W. B. Swann and the Chattanooga Times in the amount of $100,000. This suit is returnable for the fourth Monday in March.

Boy's Presence of Mind
May Save Mother's Life
If Mrs. Reda Edison, 31, of a local hotel, recovers from the effects of a dose of alleged self-administered poison taken Sunday night, she will owe her life to the presence of mind of her 11-year-old son, Billy. It was said at Grady hospital.

Mrs. Edison told Patrolman Joe E. Wiley that she had swallowed the poison only a few minutes before her son entered the room. "He kissed me and, suspecting something wrong, questioned me," she declared. "When I told him what I had done he quickly went to the telephone and called for an ambulance."

At the hospital the woman said that her husband had deserted her some months ago in Birmingham. Since that time she has been employed as housekeeper in the local hotel. "My boy and I have been hungry lots of times and I just couldn't stand it any longer," she was quoted as saying.

Doctors said she probably will recover.

BURIAL IN ARLINGTON FOR ADMIRAL RODGERS

Retired Veteran of 2 Wars Succumbs in New York Hospital.

NEW YORK, March 1.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Thomas S. Rodgers, 72, veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, died yesterday in a hospital. Burial will be made in Arlington Tuesday.

Admiral Rodgers retired in 1919. He served on the Bennington and Monterey during the Spanish-American War. In 1906 he became assistant commander of the fourth naval district and 10 years later was elevated to the rank of admiral.

He commanded division seven of the Atlantic fleet during the World War.

He came here six days ago.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Jennie Salzberg, of New York. The body was shipped tonight to New York.

MRS. CHANCELLOR
TO BE BURIED TODAY
Final rites for Mrs. T. S. Chancellor, of 2220 Peachtree road, member of a pioneer family, who died Saturday afternoon at a private hospital while funeral services were being conducted for her brother, George C. Zimmer, will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill chapel with the Rev. H. C. Burgin officiating. Interment will be in West View cemetery.

Mrs. Chancellor was a native of Knoxville, Tenn., and the daughter of the late Valentine Zimmer, pioneer resident of Atlanta. She had lived in Atlanta the major portion of her life, and was widely known.

She is survived by her husband; a son, C. C. Chancellor; a daughter, Mrs. F. A. Trimble; a brother, Will V. Zimmer, of Dulles; a sister, Mrs. T. Z. Gwin, of New York; and a grandson, Philip Chancellor Trimble.

Leon Trotsky Loses Possessions As Island Villa Burns to Ground

ISTANBUL, Turkey, March 1.—(AP)—The villa occupied by Leon Trotsky on Prinkipo island in the Sea of Marmara burned to the ground this morning.

The exiled soviet leader, who had been ill with malaria, and his wife, also ill, were uninjured but their private possessions, including material for a book the exile had been writing, were destroyed.

Trotsky was not even able to save a suit of clothes but he did preserve valuable letters from Lenin, with whom he was associated in the early days of the soviet union.

The fire began in a faulty stove in a bathroom on the lower floor of the villa and awakened the cook, who roused the family. Trotsky's secretary seized two fire extinguishers but found both empty, and when Turkish firemen arrived they were hampered by a lack of water which made it impossible to extinguish the flames until a great part of the rambling wooden house had been destroyed.

Trotsky and his wife took refuge in a Prinkipo hotel. The exile refused to emerge tonight but instructed his secretary to tell the press that the fire was due entirely to the over-heated stove and had no connection with any plot by white Russians or adherents of the present Russian regime.

Trotsky's valuable library of hundreds of books was destroyed, as were many papers which were the fruit of his mental labors for two years. He managed to save a manuscript of a history of the Russian revolution which is about to be published.

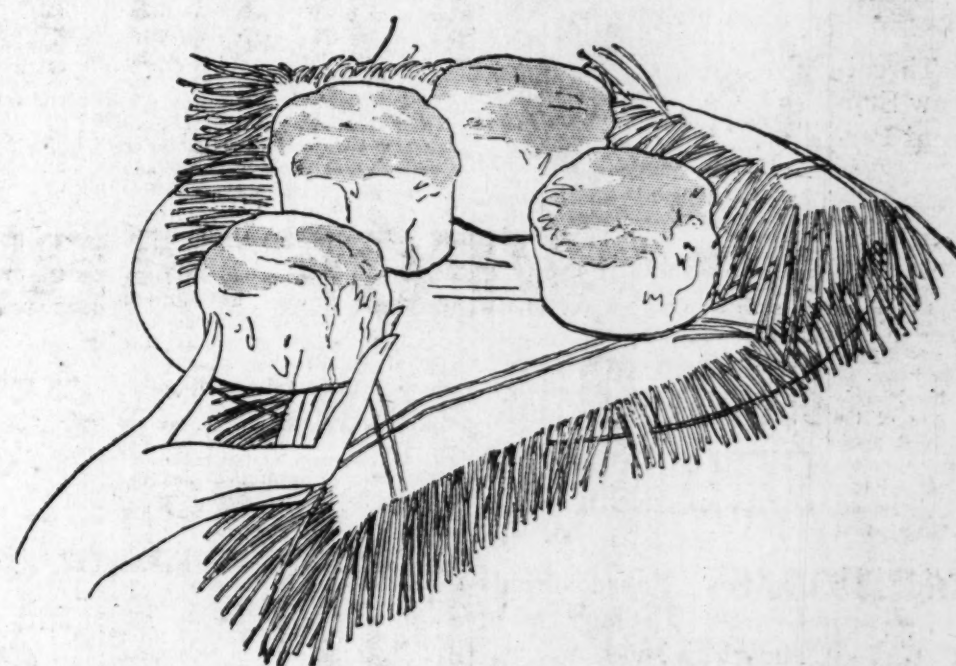

The noted exile had intended next month to quit the villa because the proprietor refused to repair it. He rented it from a son of a former Turkish grand-vizier.

NEW HOPE SHINES IN INDIA SITUATION

Gandhi and Viceroy,
After 6-Hour Parley,
Voice Optimism.

NEW DELHI, India, March 1.—(AP)—After six hours of heart-to-heart talk, Mahatma Gandhi, the little nationalist leader, and the viceroy of India tonight managed to prevent India's political peace ship from foundering.

After it had appeared negotiations to calm the country's turmoil of political affairs were doomed to failure, the little half-clad leader emerged smiling from his long talk with Lord Irwin and announced the conference would be continued Tuesday.

Believing that efforts for an agreement were deadlocked, most of the members of the nationalist cabinet already had bought tickets for home. Last night it had appeared no power on earth could adjust the disagreement after the working committee of the All-India national congress had

Alabama Solon Asks More Honest 'Leggers'

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 1.—(AP)—The temperance committee of the Alabama house of representatives has for consideration a resolution that calls for honesty in bootleggers if they insist on clinging to their calling.

The resolution, introduced Friday by Representative Massey Edgar, of Washington county, condemns liquor vendors, if any, for the alleged practice of selling short pints in the Alabama capitol. The resolution further invades the realm of extra-legality by memorializing bootleggers to sell only 16-ounce pints.

Speaker A. M. Tunstall, who seemed to have been nodding when the resolution was read, asked if it concerned itself with the quality or quantity of whisky. When informed that it was a question of quantity, he referred it to the temperance committee. "Otherwise," he said, "it would go to the committee on public health."

rejected the viceroy's offer for a compromise settlement.

Tonight's sudden optimistic turn came as a greater surprise to members of Gandhi's cabinet than to any one else. Only this morning two of them told the Associated Press they expected hourly to be arrested once the British government gave its final nod to Gandhi's demands.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION IN MONTHLY SESSION

Delegates to Georgia Federation Meeting Are Chosen; Underwood Felicitated.

The Atlanta Typographical Union, composed of some 500 printers, held its monthly meeting at the Labor temple Sunday afternoon.

Included in the business of the session was an election of delegates to the Georgia Federation of Labor, which convenes in April at Brunswick. Luther Still, of The Atlanta Constitution, and Jesse T. Collins, of the Southern Ruralist, were the successful contestants. Mr. Still received the highest vote over a number seeking the honor.

A delegation of the garment workers on strike appeared before the local and made statements.

A motion prevailed authorizing a letter be transmitted under the seal of the union felicitating E. Marvin Underwood upon his appointment as United States judge. Mr. Underwood has served as attorney for the Typographical Union for the past several years, having been appointed to this position by Luther Still, who was president of the union at the time of appointment.

Mountain Lioness Kills Two Women in Mexico

TAMPEICO, Mexico, March 1.—(AP)—Armed peasants were scouring the country here today in a hunt for a ferocious mountain lioness which yesterday killed two women.

Inhabitants in the vicinity of the tragedy, which occurred 35 miles from here, were in a state of terror. Children were kept indoors, houses were tightly closed and farmers left their homes only with weapons.

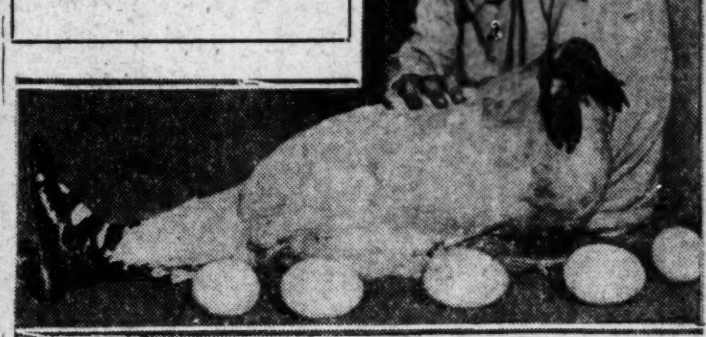

While the beast has not been seen since the attack, the hunters found three "bs" in the rugged country near the scene of the killing. Both of the women killed were wives of peasants. The lioness was driven away with stones as she was about to devour the bodies. The clothing of the women had been cleared to shreds.

TWELVE BANDSMEN DROWNED IN CHILE

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 1.—(AP)—Twelve members of a military band which had been playing at a supper for the Prince of Wales, were drowned when a lighter on which they were returning to Valdivia was rammed and sunk on Lake Languibue late last night. The lighter was struck by the steamer Chile. Only one body was recovered. Seven other members of the band were rescued.

Hapeville Hen Enters Her Claim For 'Oversize Egg' Championship

Little Miss Ann Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wood, of Hapeville, and the Wood family's White Leghorn hen, surrounded by five specimens of the hen's egg-laying ability. The size of these eggs, according to the Wood family, entitles their pet to championship honors.—Staff photo by Bill Mason.

BY B. R. CRISLER.

People for whom an egg is something scrambled, shirred, boiled, or straight up, and nothing more, will not sympathize with the delicate temerity of the born poultry fancier—for whom it is an object to write poems, to shed tears, or, if necessary, to fight and die—like an ideal or an abstract principle of justice.

The Battle of the Eggs, which promises to rival Swift's Battle of the Books in its ferocity, was hatched in just such a tiny and seemingly insignificant nest as that in which the late World War was engendered. It all began with a story which appeared in The Constitution last Thursday, advancing the claims of "Pet," a Rhode Island Red hen owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bender, of 104 Merritts avenue, N. E., to the title of Georgia's champion producer of oversize eggs.

This story was too much for Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wood, of 3247 Oakdale road, Hapeville. It was one of those indignities which a person cannot submit to in silence. It seemed to the Wood family that all the cumulative injustice of the world had been concentrated there, in a few paragraphs of type; and the Wood family's answer to claims which they considered outrageously extravagant, was prompt and decisive action.

83 Per Cent of Textile Industry Now Aligned for Night Work Ban

CHARLOTTE, N. C., March 1.—(AP)—W. M. McLaurine, secretary of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, announced in his final report today 83 per cent of the cotton textile industry of the United States had agreed to discontinue night employment of women and minors.

A total of 26,000,000 spindles, including 79 per cent of the spindles in night running mills, are represented in the agreement, he said. The campaign to discard night work in mills for women and minors was launched five months ago by the Cotton Textile Institute. Of New York, an organization made up of members of the American and the National Cotton Manufacturers' Association.

"We announce," the statement said, "the necessary conformity to the elimination of night work for women and minors in cotton mills, and, therefore, that the voluntary plan for such elimination becomes effective. The industry is to be heartily congratulated on the conclusive support it has given this great reform."

Boy Found Dead.

JACKSON, Tenn., March 1.—(AP)—With both legs and an arm severed from his body, A. T. Bowden, 17, Little Rock, Ark., was found dead on a railway track here today. Railway officials said he tried to hop a moving freight. He bled to death before a passerby found him.

You Can't Be Dainty With A Cold In The Head

In a few deep breaths, Vapex banishes all the distress of cold

No woman can possibly be at her best with a cold. Her nose becomes red and stuffed, her head feels clogged, and the miserable distress ruins her good disposition. Simply put a drop on the handkerchief or a drop at each end of the pillow. Breathe the delightful vapor and you breathe your cold away.

Swiftly Vapex clears the head, opens up the nose, dries secretions. A few deep breaths relieve distress and make you feel better. If a cold keeps you awake, use Vapex at night and rise in the morning refreshed and soothed.

Vapex is very inexpensive. The $1 bottle contains fifty applications—an average of only a cent apiece. Millions of bottles are sold yearly. It is approved by Good Housekeeping because it is safe for every one—even little children.

138,000 LOSE JOBS WITH SOVIET UNION

Government Conducts Drastic "Cleansing" of Pay Rolls.

MOSCOW, March 1.—(AP)—Despite the serious shortage of workers and charges of forced labor, authorities here announced that through a special "cleansing" process some 138,000 government public employees in the Soviet union have been dismissed from service.

It was stated that more than 125,000 persons have been thoroughly examined and "cleansed." Numerous others were transferred to different jobs where it was believed they were better fitted and many were demoted for lack of skill. A large percentage were dismissed outright.

The principal causes of the dismissals were described as "distortion of the government policy, bureaucratic incompetence."

The statement said that "incapable bureaucrats, embezzlers of government funds, ex-czarists, landlords, former gendarmes officers, ex-police officials, ecclesiastical servants and other enemies of the Soviet system were dismissed under the first category."

These workers cannot be re-employed by the government offices but they may engage in other occupations. Altogether about 25,000 were dismissed under the first category. All of them may appeal higher bodies which can restore those expelled or lessen the severity of their treatment.

Those discharged under categories two and three generally find employment immediately in other institutions, such as technical offices, involving less responsibility.

In Moscow, along with the "cleansing," authorities already have completed examination of 40 central departments of the government employing 31,000 persons. Two hundred and fifty offices employing 74,000 still remain to be investigated.

The truth is that the Soviet leaders realize there is a huge quantity of irresponsible and unnecessary work being done in the Soviet union and that labor shortage would be materially increased if the incompetents were discharged or transferred. Attempts also are being made to cut the red tape which previously has been hampering great industrial construction.

EXTENT OF TENNESSEE PROBE PROVES PUZZLE

BY RALPH WHEATLEY.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 1.—(AP)—How far the legislative committee's investigation into state affairs will go was a question that received serious consideration by its members over the week-end.

If the opinion in some groups that they should pry into conditions in all state departments rules many more weeks would be required. That automatically would mean that another recess of the state legislature would be sought shortly after it comes back on March 16.

Chairman Walter Faulkner, together with others, has voiced the opinion that they should go to the "very depths and get at the truth if it takes a year." Others favor skimming off the cream of the important information and then turning the report over to the grand jury and the impeachment agitators and getting back to the committee's preliminary report for the legislature, or both.

The immediate program is to complete the testimony by Wednesday into the affairs of the Nashville office of Caldwell & Co. and the Bank of Tennessee. After Wednesday they will go to Knoxville to look into the affairs of the Holston Union National bank and its associated Holston Trust Company and then return to Nashville.

The remaining week preceding the reopening of the legislature probably will be spent either in investigating the state purchasing department or in preparing the committee's preliminary report for the legislature, or both.

Tomorrow marks the beginning of the seventh week of the inquiry and the investigators have heard rumblings that some members of the legislature plan to kick up a burrah over the cost of the investigation and make demands that it be closed down immediately.

During the period between now and legislature time, decision will be reached on whether they will go all the way down the line and into the bypaths or only gather in the red hot stuff and lay down the baton with a blast from the trombones with the slides wide open.

COLONEL F. S. L. PRICE BURIED AT GAINESVILLE

Last rites for Colonel Frederick S. L. Price, U. S. A., commanding officer of the national guard units in the fourth corps area, who died late Friday at the base hospital at Fort McPherson, were held at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning at Spring Hill chapel.

Chaplain Joseph O. Enserud, of the army post, officiated, and interment followed with full military honors at Alta Vista cemetery, at Gainesville. All officers of the 326th infantry reserves, of which Colonel Price was instructor, attended the services here in full uniform as a tribute to their leader.

Colonel Price is survived by his widow; one son, Robert Price; two daughters, Mrs. Harry Workman, of Fort Sill, Okla.; and Miss Barbara Price, of Atlanta; and a brother, W. P. Price, also of Atlanta; four sisters, Mrs. W. S. Wilson, of Savannah; Mrs. J. A. Charters, of Gainesville; Mrs. John C. West, of Atlanta; and Mrs. A. B. Craig, of Dahlonega.

2 FILLING STATIONS NET BANDITS $7

A pair of young bandits early Sunday morning staged forays on two Gulf filling stations, and obtained $7 for their trouble. Their car was later recovered by police.

P. B. Bagwell, night manager of a Gulf filling station at Seminole and Ponce de Leon avenue, reported to police Sunday that the pair held him up and took $4. The description and tag number of the machine used by the bandits tallied with that reported by C. E. Brannon, another Gulf operator at Stewart avenue and Whitehall street, who stated that he lost $3 to the two. The bandit car later was found at Cain and Spruce streets, and is thought by police to be a stolen machine.

Arnold To Reply To Fund Diversion Proposal Today

Reuben Arnold, prominent Atlanta lawyer, will answer Governor L. G. Hardman's latest appeal for diversion of state highway department funds to meet needs of other state departments, in an address before the Atlanta Motor Club at 12:30 o'clock today at the Ansley hotel.

In his address Mr. Arnold will go into the two recent open appeals to the public by the state executive. Charlie Cook, secretary of the Atlanta club, Sunday announced that representatives of the Augusta, Savannah, Macon and Columbus clubs would be in attendance today to hear Mr. Arnold.

Following the lawyer's address members of the club will be asked to act on resolutions approving the move to obtain a driver's license law for Georgia and also will hear a report on the Atlanta traffic situation compiled by a special committee of the club headed by B. C. Broyles.

In making known the contents of his report Mr. Broyles Sunday said that six persons have died in Atlanta since February 1 as the result of motor car accidents and added that the club would be asked to pass strong resolutions calling for changes in the traffic code and strict adherence thereto in order to reduce the number of fatalities.

Muscle Shoals Bill Assumes Vast Symbolical Importance

Measure Which Hoover Now Holds Is Intricate Result of Compromise of Many Views.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The center of interest in the closing hours of congress is Muscle Shoals. The question about the bill is not whether the president will veto it. That is taken for granted. The question is, what form his veto will take. He can veto it by merely doing nothing whatever, because the bill was passed within 10 days of the end of the session and during that period a president, by merely not signing a bill, has the effect of vetoing it. His so-called pocket veto was the method by which ex-President Coolidge killed a similar Muscle Shoals bill in 1928. President Hoover's other course is the veto the bill affirmatively by sending it back to congress with a statement of his reason for disapproving it.

In one of these ways Muscle Shoals will be disposed of by noon on Wednesday. That is, it will be disposed of for the present. Immediately thereafter Hoover will take on what is already its more essential character, namely, that of a symbol. As the symbol of the political issue of electrical power Muscle Shoals will draw increasingly until the end of next year's presidential election.

Intricate Bill.
The bill itself, authorizing President Hoover's hand is so extremely intricate that utterly diverse interpretations are made of it. The reason lies in the question of the motives that entered into the writing of the bill. Those who wanted Muscle Shoals used to make fertilizer fought those who wanted it to be electric. Those who wanted to establish the principle of government operation wrangled with those who favored the contrary principle of keeping the government out of business and therefore disposing of Muscle Shoals by sale or lease to a private corporation.

The bill which emerged as the result of these mixed motives begins by giving to President Hoover conditionally the duty of leasing Muscle Shoals to a private corporation to make fertilizer. This leasing provision was written as a compromise. About the meaning and purpose of it, the very person who wrote it or who in conference assented to it, differs. One group says the leasing provision is written with the good-faith purpose of having Muscle Shoals disposed of in this way. Another group says the leasing provision was written into the bill with knowledge that it could never take effect, and only as a device to save the faces of those who stood out for private operation. Yet another group says the leasing provision is merely made so intricate and so drastic that no private corporation would ever lease the plant.

Many Conditions.
Among many onerous stipulations the lessee must make fertilizer of a defined kind and must make a minimum quantity. The fertilizer must be sold at a price permitting not exceeding 8 per cent profit on the turn over, and "not exceeding 6 per cent on any capital invested by the lessee." The lessee is forbidden substantially, to make any other product except fertilizer. If the lessee wishes to make some other by-product of nitrogen it must do so in a separate plant, "not in connection with the leased premises." The amount of electrical power which the lessee may use in making a product other than fertilizer shall be not more than 15 per cent of what it uses for fertilizer. This part of the power shall "in no way be connected directly or indirectly with the power used for the production of fertilizer on said leased premises."

This curious stipulation was inserted to express the jealousy of those who want Muscle Shoals to be devoted to the government manufacture of electricity.

In the debates it was stated over and over that these intricate and onerous provisions were written so as to make it difficult or impossible for any private lessee to take the plant. As Congressman Albert W. Johnson, of Washington, put it: "The leasing proposal is so hedged about that there are likely to be no bidders." Congressman Treadway, of Massachusetts, described the leasing provision as "a smoke-screen and nothing else. An effort to fool the people into thinking there is likelihood of a lease being made."

Given 12 Months.
To find someone willing to lease the plant for making fertilizer on these terms, President Hoover is given 12 months. If at the end of 12 months he has not found a lessee, thereupon the really portentous part of the bill comes into effect. Muscle Shoals would then become a plant primarily for the manufacture and sale of electricity by the federal government. It is perfectly well known that this is the real desire of Senator Norris and most of those who promoted the bill.

This part of the bill dictates that there shall be three directors "not more than two of whom shall belong to the same political party." All members of the board shall profess a belief in the "feasibility and wisdom" of the project. "In selling the electricity the board, 'shall give preference to states, counties or municipalities.' The board is expressly authorized, either from appropriations by congress or from funds from the sale of power to construct transmission lines."

To this government corporation is given one extraordinary privilege. "The corporation as an instrumentality of the government of the United States, shall have access to the patent office of the United States for the purpose of copying all methods. Any patentee whose patent rights have been thus in any way copied shall have as the exclusive remedy a cause of action on the equity side of the appropriate district court of the United States for the recovery of reasonable compensation."

This authorized trespass upon private patent rights should be more shocking to the principle of private property than the government manufacture of electricity.

ARKANSAN IS KILLED IN TENNESSEE CRASH

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 1.—(AP) Owen Moffett, 20, Little Rock, Ark., cigar store clerk, was killed and his companion, Miss Pat Campbell, 20, Little Rock manicurist, was injured seriously in an automobile collision here early today.

Moffett's car was struck on the Harahan bridge, which crosses the Mississippi river here, by an automobile driven by Edison Hall, 20, Memphis newspaper copy boy. Hall, charged with manslaughter and reckless driving, posted bond for trial in city court tomorrow.

Hospital physicians said Miss Campbell's skull may have been fractured. She has a good chance to recover, the hospital reported.

When Moffett's body reached the hospital, physicians removed about $125 from his pockets. The money disappeared from the operating room and police arrested Ross Willford, 23, Memphis, for questioning.

AUTO CRASH VICTIM IN SERIOUS CONDITION
VALDOSTA, Ga., March 1.—(AP) James Southall, a resident of the Rockyford district, injured Saturday night, when his car crashed into an electric pole, Sunday was reported in a serious condition.

WHEAT FARMERS GLAD AT HEAVY SNOWFALL
KANSAS CITY, March 1.—(AP) Moving east from the Rocky mountains, a spring storm has gladdened wheat farmers of the southwest by swaddling fields under a white coverlet of snow.

The precipitation meant millions of dollars to growers whose fields were unusually dry after an exceptionally mild and arid winter. Precipitation in the Oklahoma Panhandle reached six inches in places but melted rapidly under the sun's rays. At Lubbock, Texas, seven inches of snow seriously hampered automobile transportation. The white blanket also extended into Kansas and western Missouri.

A CITIZEN WHEREVER WE SERVE

Youthful Briton's Political Threat Marks Week's News

BY A. H. UHL.

Associated Press Cable Editor.

The old-line leadership of the great political parties in Great Britain is having its hands full with its young bloods.

Both Ramsay MacDonald, veteran head of the labor party and premier now for almost two years, and Stanley Baldwin, long the conservative leader, are meeting challenges that within the next few years may change the political history of Great Britain.

In the labor party it is young Sir Oswald Mosley, barely 35 and known far and wide as the "millionaire socialist," who is boldly challenging the old-line parties with a "new party" as it will be called. He plans to put 400 candidates in the field in the next general election.

In the conservative party Winston Churchill, not so young in years perhaps but still fiery as ever, has parted company with Baldwin on the Indian problem and during the week got a unanimous vote of approval from his constituency on his stand.

Churchill was victorious in his denunciation of Mahatma Gandhi, Indian nationalist leader, and he did not mince words in his criticism of what he believes is the weakness shown by the laborites in their handling of the Indian problem and in accepting the program of the round table conference calling for modified self-rule for India. The conservative party has officially given support to the round table program and it is on this point that Churchill has reared his back.

The Mosley break with the labor party is not only confined to that political group, for the young leader has issued a call to youthful laborites and liberals as well to flock to his banner in a fight against the older parties.

The scheme as outlined is a plan for reorganization of the whole government into what has been described as a limited dictatorship. It calls for the creation of a tariff system to protect the home markets from "dumping," price fluctuation and competition with cheap labor. Young

Oliver Baldwin, son of the conservative leader, but himself a laborite until recently, resigned from the labor party during the week and may join the Mosley group.

Sir Oswald has long been dissatisfied with the MacDonald leadership of the party, contending that haste with the development of reform measures has been made entirely too slow. His call is for a youth of the country. On their response may hang important developments in the history of Great Britain.

The South American revolutions still are not over. During the week Peru found itself involved in a new revolt against the revolutionary and provisional government of Sanchez Cerro. To the north and the south of Lima the banner of revolt has been lifted. Reports across the border into Chile have been indicated a communist tinge among some of the laborers.

After one effort looking toward peace which failed to win support, the government started vigorous measures against the revolutionists. But they were unable to stem the tide of revolt and Sanchez Cerro resigned the provisional presidency Sunday.

Spain to a great extent has quieted down and the new monarchist government of Premier Aznar plunged into its work of restoring normal conditions and preparing for coming elections. The socialists and republicans for the most part have adopted a watchful waiting policy.

Dame Nellie Melba, famous opera singer, who had returned to her native land where she was dearly loved, died early last week after a brief illness. Messages of sympathy were received from all parts of the world where the singer had made herself universally beloved.

Frequent rumors that Ambassador Davies was planning to resign his post in London were set at rest in an interview in which the ambassador said he intended to finish out his term. This means that he will remain in London for two more years at least.

of their finances, reorganization or mergers with other institutions. Out of 98 state banks that closed, 57 have reopened.

In addition several national banks caught in the whirlpool of collapses have come back.

Other states have shown similar progress.

A third of the 75 banks that closed in Mississippi in recent months have opened their doors, and as in other states many of the others are working on reorganization plans.

In Kentucky, where failures, as in Arkansas, date from last November, 17 of the 25 that closed are now operating. Virtually all of the banks in western North Carolina that closed have reopened.

Five of the eight that shut their doors in Louisiana in recent months have made recoveries.

In Tennessee, several that closed for one reason or another during times of unprecedented stress, reopened after a short time and others are now in process of reorganization.

Higher Education Divided Result of Potlikker Row

WAKE FOREST, N. C., March 1. The Atlanta Constitution's cornpone and potlikker argument with Governor Hines Long has plunged this otherwise tranquil Baptist college community into a feverish factional war over a subject purely collateral to dunking or crumbling.

Whether or not it is proper to put salt in cornbread is Wake Forest's auxiliary contribution to the major argument between the leading Georgia paper and the picturesque Louisiana governor and senator-elect "by grace of the people."

It was The Constitution's cornbread recipe that precipitated hostilities on Wake Forest campus. A member of the faculty at breakfast banged his fist on the table:

"This," he asserted, in a tone audible over the dining room, "is not the way to make it. The Cornpone and Potlikker editor ought to know that all that is necessary to make a good pone of cornbread is to mix waterground meal and water and salt."

"Pardon me," interjected a younger member of the faculty, "but do you think any really nice people put salt in their cornbread?"

That exchange started the campus conflagration. Students postponed matutinal chores to write home about it. By 10 o'clock the campus was divided between the Salters and Non-Salters. And, by 12 o'clock, the dean complicated matters when he unexpectedly picked for his chapel talk:

"Wherewith shall it be salted?" But from a tenure of 50 years in one kitchen a Wake Forest cook poured oil on the troubled waters:

"No, sub," she said, "white folks don't want no salt in dey cornbread. Dey don't wuk, none and co'se dey don't need salt."

DUNKING COLONY FOUND RIGHT HERE IN ATLANTA
Dunking-Crumbling Editor,
Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Sir:

Why crumble when dunking is the old time-honored custom? Members of the German-American club take sides with the dunkers—and why? Because dunking is an old German custom. Yab, ages ago, while nothing but wild Indians roamed over here, dunking was being practiced in Germany. The word "dunking" is an ancient bit of German slang, meaning "to dip your bread, etc."

So when Heine Hasenpfeffer, Jacob Knackwurst, and all true and faithful Deutsch came over, bringing the good old lager beer, limburger, pumpernickel and other famous old-country dishes, they brought the art of dunking with them; and the true southern gentlemen and ladies fair started dunking when they attended the "kaffleklatch" and have kept it up ever since.

Prosit to the dunkers, with guten appetit.

Good potlikker and cornpone

In this cold climate are unknown

Except by a few who, like myself,

Have strayed so far from home.

It doesn't mean a thing to me;

Dunk or crumble it could be.

If I could know, at dinner-time,

That southern dish I'd see.

Up here in all the ice and snow

Those good old turnips will

Not grow;

Each time I go to market here

I miss the turnips so.

I'm hoping, praying that next fall

I'll once more be down with

And then I'll dunk and crumble, too.

"OLD RUBE" WAS BORN OF CRUMBLING STOCK
Potlikker Editor,

Atlanta Constitution:

I am very reluctant to join in this very serious and grave discussion as to which is the proper way to eat potlikker and cornpone, but it strikes me that some of the old rubes who were raised on potlikker and cornpone will have to settle this argument.

I notice that most of this argument is coming from city folks, governors, mayors, lawyers, doctors, preachers, editors and the like, and no doubt most of them are like Mayor Jimmie Walker and never have seen a real cornpone, like an old rube out here in the sticks were raised on.

On February 22, 1899, surrounded by a cornfield, with a patch of turnip salad near-by, this old rube opened his eyes and first saw the light of this world; and to his mind of my recollection, skill and knowledge, we had potlikker and cornpone on that same day; and from that good day up to the present I have been eating potlikker and cornpone, and through all of these many years, without a single exception we did crumble. Dear Sir:

When I was a small boy, at 4 o'clock each afternoon "Granny" brought to all the children on our plantation the best potlikker with soaked bread that I ever ate. Dear Sir:

I am writing this letter on behalf of W. W. Perkins, better known to his many friends as Uncle Billy. Uncle Billy, who has been dunking cornpone in potlikker for almost 75 years, is very much upset over the fact that some of the young newspaper-snappers of the present generation even consider crumbl'g their cornpone in their potlikker. Uncle Billy states that it is not a mark of southern aristocracy to crumble cornpone, and that any man who indulges in crumbl'g is not a true southern gentleman.

ROCKMARTIAN RECALLS EARLY DOUGHNUT ROMANCE

Potlikker Editor of Constitution,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

Glimpsing the striking picture of Mayor Key, with a bevy of radiant Camp Fire girls, in Wednesday's paper—all munching on something that immediately set my mouth to watering and my mind to thinking.

Now I am strong on Georgia potlikker, but equally as strong on that something the mayor held in his hand, that any Georgia-born man would readily recognize, in Maine or California, if he should chance to meet one of them that far from home—"dolars to doughnuts." We Georgians know they are made of Georgia wheat and good old Georgia cane syrup or sugar, and should always be included, as the finishing course in a menu beginning with potlikker or whatnot.

Now back to the dainty doughnut. That picture at once brought sacred memories to my mind and heart of 46 years ago, at which time I vainly escorted one of Georgia's most beautiful maidens to a joint May Day picnic, of Rockmart and Cedartown, at old Hightower falls.

Now in those good old days of long ago, the mode of travel was not by the swift auto, but in a Georgia buggy, drawn by a proud Georgia horse.

Incidentally a Barnesville buggy, where I lived 48 years ago.)

Now back to doughnuts again. At the aforesaid time and place, there was a great picnic spread, the tables being loaded with good eats and crowded with luscious doughnuts. I quickly seized one of those sugar-covered rings, and deftly placed on the dainty finger of this swooning maid, who I will call Mollie, and call to witness this gala party to the engagement which sealed the fate of two fluttering hearts, to forever beat as one, on February 25, 1885.

Now from this good day on let epicurians and potlikker champions, from Governor Long to Mayor Walker, not forget doughnuts.

To that Golden Wedding Day

We are bending every nerve

To round every curve

On life's rapid-transit railway.

Yours, to be announced February 25, 1935.

So, here's to doughnuts.

DISCORDANT NOTE STRUCK BY CHARMING MODERNIST

Editor, Potlikker Debate,
Atlanta Constitution,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

This ignorance, bless my soul! Let me whisper. I would not want to embarrass one so kindly meaning, have you never heard of the waterless cooker (of a hundred brands)? Ah, the shades of inventive genius have struck even you, not mine, potlikker!

Thousands of families, north, south, east, west, are looking askew at you today—sympathizing that you do not know that the brewing of the potlikker beverage is no longer possible. Turnip greens no longer have the freedom of a gallon of water in which to swim. No, sir, if there is a tablespoon of water found in the waterless vessel when the greens are served, that water in truth is the juice from the vegetable.

I dislike to throw a damper over an enjoyable controversy, sizzling with paternalistic heat, but we modernists, who dress, eat, sleep and work to the tune set by the inventive genius, feel the call of tenth. We must speak.

Potlikker is an antiquated as the horse and buggy!

Where can grandmother's iron pot, weighing several pounds, be found? If you expect co-operation from us, you will have to send out a searching party to dig beneath still-houses, into cribs and hay-seed barns to bring forth the correct vessel in which we can brew some of your potlikker. Oh, we might find some sort of a container adequate in size, but we moderns, some of us, have temperamental views. A figure dressed in the fashions of 1850 topped by a 1830 turban misses our mark of appreciation.

We vote on the fireless cooker. Would you like proof of the death of your potlikker?

Be it so, crepe, black crepe, is in order for both dunking and crumbl'g. Although cornpone, and even it has changed to egg-bread, still survives, it is fool's and potlikker's demise lies in the bottom of the bright waterless vessels found in every modern home. Inventive genius again wallops individualism.

EFFORTS TO CUT TAXES.

After a careful survey of the many taxation problems that are provoking discussion in the forty-four legislatures now in session between the two oceans, the Manufacturers Record, a reliable indicator, finds that the best hope lies in drastic reductions of town and county expenses.

As to the municipalities the most propositions are to fix a maximum limit to their taxing power. The state charters municipal units, grants to them all the powers they possess, and has full constitutional right to limit their taxing, spending and debt-making privileges. It is clearly to the interest of the state to build up towns and cities in which property values and business privileges increase and contribute largely to the state's upkeep; hence, the towns and cities should be restrained from hogging and squandering too much of the tax-paying ability of their inhabitants.

As for the counties, like measures of restraint and limitation are proposed, but these are accompanied by strong arguments for reducing county units and their abnormal expenses by consolidations of two or more into one efficient and economical administration. The method of making county mergers must vary with state constitutions and political conditions, but here in Georgia such mergers are provided for in a self-executing paragraph of the state constitution. There can be no prohibition of any county effecting a merger with another when two-thirds of its qualified voters so elect. The remedy for county burdens is fully in the hands of the people of every county in the state.

THE BIG ISSUE OF 1932.

Several of the leading independent journals of the country are expressing the opinion that if it is in the political cards for the democratic party to stand in 1932 for the repeal or liberal modification of the prohibition amendment, the sooner that fact is made certain the better will be the fortunes of the party in the presidential campaign.

There is reported, upon good evidence, to be a large element of independent voters throughout the nation who favor prohibition revision and who would be attracted to the democratic party if assured that it will champion that cause in 1932. But how to convey that assurance will be the crux of the situation.

It is generally agreed that the national committee of the party, meeting next Thursday in Washington, has no competency to formulate and declare a policy for the party on so controversial a subject as national prohibition. But the members of the committee, supposedly well informed of the temper of democratic sentiment in their states, might be polled unofficially and give some indication of how the amendment repeal issue may likely fare in the national convention of next year.

It is unquestionable that public opinion is decidedly opposed to either of the parties adopting a straddling position upon the prohibition problem. The people want to know positively how each of them would deal with the problem if voted control of the government in full measure. Those of them who hope for prohibition betterment are looking to the democratic party to say what that betterment should be.

Big Bill Thompson got a plurality in Chicago, but he may run into a political mortality in April.

What congress left in the treasury was Andy Mellon and a repair job for the locksmen.

THE PASSING OF THE WORLD.

The New York Morning World, founded by that undaunted idealist and courageous editor, Joseph Pulitzer, has joined the New York Herald and the New York Morning Sun in that Valhalla where rest the souls of great newspapers stricken by mergers. And at the same time another attempt to establish a newspaper dynasty has proved futile.

The bitterness which the spirit of the elder Pulitzer must have felt when the heritage he left his sons slipped from their hands surely found some solace in the fact that it passed into the hands of the Scripps-Howard group of newspapers. For there is much in common between the ideas and ideals of these men—the founder of the World and the owners of the New York Telegram, an evening newspaper, which with its issue of Saturday became the World-Telegram.

Roy Howard and Robert P. Scripps, son of the founder of the Scripps-McCraw chain, now the Scripps-Howard group composed of 25 newspapers, have proved their willingness to fight for what they believed to be right, and like the elder Pulitzer they have not hesitated to strike at evils or battle for causes that seemed unpopular.

There could have been so more logical combination that that of the Morning World and its evening edition with the New York afternoon newspaper owned by the Scripps-Howard interests.

These are the words of the great editor and publisher, which for nearly fifty years, and until Saturday morning, were printed in every issue of the World at the head of its editorial page under the caption: The World as established by Joseph Pulitzer, May 10, 1893.

An institution that should always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight denunciations of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Joseph Pulitzer made the World, from first to last, a fighting newspaper. He was literally tireless in his crusades, and never permitted any influence to divert him from his path. For him, as his biographer, Dan Seitz, wrote, "the newspaper was not a mere chronicle. His passion was to be felt in the strife of public forces than at play." Mr. Seitz expresses the belief—and it seems a logical one—that the World accomplished the greatest feat in all its history in 1905, when it uncovered insurance corruption and brought about needed and salutary reforms in the practice of the great corporations centered in New York.

It was this investigation, forced by the World, which brought into a prominence which was to be permanent, Charles E. Hughes.

Before it struck at the disgraceful insurance situation, the World had revealed the bribing of aldermen in connection with the street railway franchise. Pulitzer had also previously launched a campaign against contractors who were erecting flimsily-built tenements. These are but a few of the numerous and usually successful crusades undertaken by the World.

It was when the World was making its hottest fights that its growth was greatest. And if it be said that the gradual weakening of the World and its evening edition was due to the crusading spirit, that assertion may well be questioned. It is probably nearer the truth to assert that under the management which took up Pulitzer's leadership, the World failed to reckon with and meet the changing conditions. Not in years has there been any divergence in the World's general content. It had been the newspaper of the masses and led all other New York newspapers in circulation. The readers of the World, the vast majority living in and near New York, were changing their mode of life and thought. The entry of tabloids was a blow to the World's circulation. And in any efforts it may have made to meet this opposition, the World's news columns and its sophisticated editorial features failed to harmonize. Perhaps the World could not have been saved except by another genius who measured close to the elder Pulitzer.

The highest tribute to the fighting methods of its founder is the fact that the goodwill of the World and its afternoon edition was valued at $4,000,000 of the $5,000,000 paid for them although their losses had amounted to $3,000,000 in the past few years and it was estimated that the deficit for 1931 would reach $2,000,000. If the World had been merely a voiceless, purely commercial product, it would not have brought one-tenth of the price that was paid for its goodwill alone, the Pulitzer estate retaining the Pulitzer building and all the other tangible assets.

Secretary Stimson promises to get the marines out of Nicaragua before the bicentennial of this country comes around in 1976.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Another Beecher Stowe.

In the coat of arms of the republic of Liberia are written these words: "The love of liberty brought us here." The first Liberians who were settled on the west coast of Africa by the American Colonization Society in 1822 were negroes who had been torn away from slavery in the United States. It was their own love of freedom and even more their love of their white friends which made it possible to found the colony. Eight years ago it was discovered that Liberia had been established on a false premise.

The League of Nations has just published a book which leaves no doubt upon the question. The so-called pawns system has been exposed. Men pawns their wives and children for a few dollars. The report was full of instances giving names and dates.

Two years ago some Liberian women escaped and came to Europe. How they managed it, we do not recall, but one of them was a native poet, who was interviewed by the Paris papers. One of her poems was subsequently translated and printed in Comedien, the theatrical and literary daily. It went somewhat like this: "Evil has fallen upon my tribe. I have been sold as a pawn. They have taken my man and my brothers. They have gone to the sea. They die. Where they die. Tell me why the women of Wedobas have no husbands? And no brother? The mothers and fathers are dead. The kinsmen because they are not good for pawns. Tell me why?"

Those who heard her recite this primitive plaint were deeply moved by the inexpressible melancholy of its tone. It is not unlikely that the ball rolling, by arousing indignation in Europe for the inhuman conditions existing in her native land. Future Liberians will perhaps look upon her as another Harriet Beecher Stowe.

It seems that a curb is going to be put on slavery in Liberia at any rate. Liberia must bow before world opinion, for Liberia, but just state. It may be a beginning for the liberation of other millions in Africa, besides Liberians. For Lady Simon, the wife of Sir John Simon, the distinguished English liberal, made it clear in her book only a few months ago that an extensive slave trade was carried on in the Red Sea. And British still has to keep a considerable force in Kenya and Tanganyika territories to protect the natives against the slave raiders from Abyssinia.

Piscator Arrested.

The days of Dickens have been recalled by many writers in Germany. The arrest of Herr Edwin Piscator, the well-known theater manager, was the case is not quite analogous to that of Mr. Dorrit and his fellow slaves, but it is very similar. He was arrested because he was a Jew. He was arrested because he was a Jew. He was arrested because he was a Jew.

German debtors are not arrested on account of their debts, but the law after the fashion of the old times, the creditor would seize the debtor's property. The debtor would be arrested and taken to the creditor's house. The debtor would be arrested and taken to the creditor's house. The debtor would be arrested and taken to the creditor's house.

Wonder of Holland.

M. Cammaerts, the Belgian art authority lecturing in London on the subject of Rubens, said that the startling and sudden development of art in the Netherlands in the 16th century could never be explained. Hale, Rembrandt, Vermeer, Van Gogh, Dou, Hoogstraten appeared as by miracle in those Dutch cities where never any school of painting or any other art had existed before. The explanation was that the Hollanders knew the art of painting and the art of painting was the art of painting.

To Make an Intelligent Choice of Soil, First Decide What You Wish To Raise

By Robert Quillen

One great need of our times is prison reform. The need is recognized almost universally, but little is accomplished or attempted because nobody with authority seems to know what should be done or how to go about doing it. That being true, it is obvious that nothing can be done until those who see the need of reform agree on a standard of excellence to be achieved by it.

If you should ask a boy of ordinary intelligence how a certain machine should be constructed, he would answer: "What do you expect the machine to do?" To discover how a prison should be arranged, first determine the purpose of imprisonment.

If the sole purpose of prisons is to punish criminals, our present penal institutions require no reform. They provide punishment in abundance.

But if society imprisons law breakers only to protect itself and reform them, the present system is obviously wrong and the method of reform is equally obvious. Because one criminal is a vicious and depraved enemy of society, unwilling to mend his ways, and another is a repentant victim of circumstance, it is unwise and unjust to treat them as equals. The "punishment" should fit the criminal, not the crime.

Because one criminal is a professional and another is a youth serving time for his first offense, it is criminal folly to make them indistinguishable. A youth in prison, lonely, discouraged and resentful, is easily victimized by the class hatred that makes the ordinary penitentiary a school for crime. Prisoners who can be salvaged should be kept with others of their kind, free of every degrading influence.

Because mental health depends in large measure on physical health, it is wrong to crowd criminals in dark, evil-smelling and unsanitary cells of steel and stone. They should be out-of-doors in the clean air and sunshine.

And because idleness leads to mischief, in prison as elsewhere, it is unwise and unfair to give prisoners no employment to relieve the boredom of their prison days. They should have work, and by working should pay for their keep and perhaps provide bread for their dependents outside.

Stone walls and iron bars do not reform men, nor are these necessary to protect society. The tiger is an enemy of man. When captured, it must be kept in a strong cage until it dies. But it does not follow that other wild creatures, easily tamed and comparatively harmless, should be denied the open range necessary to keep them fit.

Many wild creatures can be tamed by kindness—none by means of brutality.

The Constitution in 1787 and Today

BY RANDOLPH LEIGH, M. A.,

Director, International Oratorical Contest.

PERSONALITIES OF THE CONVENTION.

This is the second of a series of articles dealing with the making and expansion of the constitution and the personalities of the convention. The convention was a gathering of men who were to shape the future of a new nation. They were men of great ability and vision, men who were to shape the future of a new nation. They were men of great ability and vision, men who were to shape the future of a new nation.

George Washington was, of course, the outstanding member of the Convention. He was a man of great ability and vision, a man who was to shape the future of a new nation. He was a man of great ability and vision, a man who was to shape the future of a new nation. He was a man of great ability and vision, a man who was to shape the future of a new nation.

Next to Washington, the most powerful and famous men of the convention were Robert Morris, financier and statesman, and James Madison, the father of the constitution. Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

ONCE A LITTLE BOY COUGHED IN THE NIGHT.

My boy, writes a young mother, is three years old. He never coughs in the daytime, but every night between 12 and 3 o'clock he has a spell of coughing, a real bark. The attacks are very mild and he is a robust child, but I should like to relieve him entirely of these night coughing spasms. I have proved your statement that cold air is soothing and tends to relieve the child. If it is, please tell me how to manage a cough. (Mrs. S. W. A.)

No, that is not a cough, though the barking cough may be correctly described as "croup," because it sounds like the peculiar barking cough of a younger developing spasmodic croup. More likely this child's cough is due to enlargement of some lymph node (adenoids) in the neck, consequent upon infection entering through a lesion of the nose, throat, teeth or ears. A not uncommon cause of such a cough in a child may long after all child has gone to bed is the irritation of the back of the throat by secretion which drains down from the back of the nose when the child lies on his back. This is an indication for a careful examination of the nose by means of headlight and speculum, and the treatment of whatever trouble the doctor finds. Often it is a simple chronic rhinitis. Obviously it is not fair to such a child to play him with alleged cough medicines. The mother needs to have his nose wiped by the doctor.

Apparently croup still happens, though I had begun to think simple spasmodic croup had been a thing of the past. It is a simple chronic rhinitis. Obviously it is not fair to such a child to play him with alleged cough medicines. The mother needs to have his nose wiped by the doctor.

Finally, chronic infections in the nasal passages or in the sinuses communicating with the nasal passages is a much more frequent cause of chronic, obstinate cough than many doctors know. They don't know because they are not trained to examine the sinuses properly or they do not get the opportunity.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK

(Special Dispatch to The Constitution and the North American Newspaper)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 1.—(NANA)—Walter Catlett has become famous on the stage and screen as a comedian. Besides this, he is one of Hollywood's favorite masters of ceremonies. But his recent address to the prisoners of the local "spud tank" tops all previous efforts at comedy.

In case you should be interested, the "spud tank" is that part of the jail in which prisoners about to be released are held. Catlett paid it a visit of a couple of hours, after his arrest. Willing to go to the "spud tank" to suit the neighbors.

His fellow inmates had their dull evening brightened by a speech in which the Henry Grady house told them he felt honored to be among them. Working up to a climax (as all good after-dinner speakers do), Catlett invited the whole crowd to be his guests to breakfast the next morning.

"Crack the dawn and our hero's release. But just to show you what a poor sense of humor the average prisoner has, about 20 men waited in the hall for the comedian to come an hour for Catlett to keep that breakfast appointment.

Hollywood is working itself into quite a froth over Sam Goldwyn's announcement of Madame Chanel's arrival from Paris within the next few days.

The latest to accept Goldwyn's invitation to attend the reception to be given for the French actress, is French consul here. This brings to mind the last time I saw M. Didot at a studio reception.

sellable; and M. Didot acquitted himself nobly on both counts. The next number on the program was that great American institution "lunch." By this time, may I add, several extras, released from their sets, had joined the guests invited to the education.

The result, as you may have guessed, was one grand rush with the extras winning. Some 20 minutes later, a few of the bolder members of our party ventured into the cafe where luncheon was being served just to see how things were going.

And let me add that they certainly were "going"—with M. Didot, the guest of honor, standing discreetly in a corner, holding a plate on which the waiter laid out one of everything, by the looks of it.

So here's wishing him better luck at Mme. Chanel's reception!

Sid Grauman's recent venture as a theatrical producer must be to his liking, as he has decided to continue along this line.

United Artists Studio are to film "Street Scene," too, and had Elmer Rice, the author, make the screen adaptation.

Radio Pictures started this vogue of giving local productions of some of their current movies.

Pershing, Tardieu Clash As Latter Tries To Go Over Head of General

Hospital Accommodations for U. S. Troops Approach a Critical Stage—Should Army Commanded by Belgian King Be Under Foch?—British Observe Fourth of July and French at Chaumont Celebrate.

BY GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING.

CHAPTER I.

Hospitalization and completion of three corps headquarters and staff organizations occupied my attention the last week of June, 1918.

Twelve of our divisions were then either in line or in reserve behind the French, five were in training in French areas and five were in training in rear of the British army. Of those with the French, seven were concentrated in the vicinity of Villers-Cotterets and Chateau Thierry, between the French front and Paris.

The British seemed to think the French unduly nervous about the safety of Paris, and that Foch was holding a greater proportion of American troops behind the French lines than necessary. They believed there was a strong probability of another attack against their front, and felt General Foch was not paying enough attention to their situation. However, they probably did not realize that counter-offensive was contemplated on this front should the occasion present itself.

The first corps headquarters, organized in January under Major General Hunter Liggett, with Colonel Malin Craig as chief of staff, had become a smoothly working machine, ready for active service anywhere, but events had moved so swiftly there had been no opportunity for the assembly of divisions.

With the increasing size of our army it was evident that a greater number of divisions would be able to take part in operations at earlier dates than we had thought possible. Consequently, the organization of the second, third and fourth corps headquarters was at once completed.

The second corps, Major General George Read commanding, with Colonel George Simonds as chief of staff, and a limited number of staff officers, was charged with the administration and command pertaining to the divisions behind the British front. The third corps, temporarily under Major General William M. Wright, Colonel Alfred Bjornstad, chief of staff, continued to supervise training of divisions serving in the Vosges area. The fourth corps was temporarily under the corps chief of staff, Colonel Stuart Heintzelman, with headquarters at Foul. By the actual constitution of these corps they were expected soon to become efficient enough to handle units in operations.

It was our policy throughout the war to make the basic corps organization as permanent as possible. The corps commander and his staff and certain corps troops such as heavy artillery, signal and engineer contingents and supply units thus formed a team that grew in efficiency with experience. Divisions were assigned to corps according to circumstances, but were not attached with any idea of permanency.

Relied on French Hospitals. As to hospitals, when our troops became suddenly engaged in the Chateau Thierry region we had to rely largely upon the assistance of the French to care for our wounded. Although they had given us every assurance that hospital arrangements for those operations would be complete, and without question did their best, it was only through the mobile hospitals we had organized that we were able to give our casualties proper attention.

In extension of the French failure to take care of our casualties properly, it must be said that when the Germans swept over the Chemin des Dames to Chateau Thierry the French lost 45,000 beds included in some of their best-equipped hospitals. We had no hospitals on that front and with limited transportation found it difficult to supplement the scant French facilities. In fact, the situation as to hospital accommodations for our troops was about to reach a critical stage.

In this connection a cable was actually submitted by Mr. Casper Whitney for the New York Tribune which was searching in its denunciation of our medical department. The censor immediately informed the medical representatives at my headquarters, and General Ireland, the chief surgeon, requested an investigation, which was at once carried out by the chief of the inspector general's corps.

ments on the western front the government had issued orders suspending the purchase of any additional animals for the American forces.

I immediately took the matter up with M. Andre Tardieu, of the Franco-American committee, calling his attention to the extent to which the French failure to supply animals would immobilize a considerable portion of our forces. As a result the French agreed to adopt a system of enforced requisition throughout France commencing June 20 and extending to August 1. It was estimated that there were in France not in military service approximately 3,000,000 animals, from 500,000 to 400,000 of which were thought to be suitable types.

We were promised 80,000 of the 160,000 to be obtained through the requisition and in addition counted on approximately 14,000 from the British in accordance with their promise to supply horses for the divisions behind their lines. Negotiations were also reopened for obtaining animals in Spain, and it was thought 25,000 could be obtained from that source.

These numbers, however, would still leave us with a large shortage August 1 and the war department was therefore requested June 30 to resume shipments at the rate of 8,000 per month. It was realized that this number would not meet requirements, but it was hoped we might obtain still further assistance from the allies and thus avoid a greater demand on our already inadequate tonnage.

"Official" Interest of French. About this time M. Tardieu took the initiative and without consulting anyone sent a cable to the French ambassador at Washington requesting that our war department begin the shipment of horses for our armies at the rate of 35,000 per month, to be increased progressively to 60,000 per month. The department was naturally alarmed as the cable indicated an action entirely at variance with what I had reported.

This is mentioned as one of the many incidents to illustrate the lack of official interest exercised by the French.

It will be recalled that exactly the same thing had happened in the fall of 1917 in connection with the shipment of horses, except that then M. Tardieu was on the receiving end in Washington. When his attention was called to the importance of co-operation he was much embarrassed, and said that no differences in the future need be feared. M. Tardieu was most efficient, and as chief of the Franco-American committee aided us materially in procurement and in many other ways.

My diary says: "Chaumont, Saturday, July 6, 1918. Conferred with Lord Milner Wednesday morning in Paris and later with Haig, giving my explanations to our troops in training being taken for an offensive.

"Attended meeting supreme war council in the afternoon. "Reached Chaumont at noon the fourth and participated in celebration at Hotel de Ville. French mission also gave an entertainment, with movies of First division at Cantigny. General de Castelnau called. General Pe-tain, General Raguenau and de Chambrun dined with us and attended a troop entertainment. Received many telegrams.

"As a compliment to the French, I issued orders yesterday making July 14 (Bastille Day) a holiday.

"Part of the Thirty-third division made an attack with the Australians on the fourth. "Held detailed discussion today with McAndrew, Hagood and Eltinge on S.O.S. reorganization." Lord Milner came in from Versailles and together we went over the problems of troop shipments and considered the continuance of tonnage for the increased American program. He assured me their plans contemplated the same help they were giving us, but he was very anxious that the American divisions behind the British lines should remain there, and somehow I felt that his assurance as to shipping might depend upon the number of divisions that would be held for service with their armies.

Marshal Haig, who called later, was also very solicitous as to the retention of our troops, and said he would be very much weakened if any more divisions were taken away. I told him that for the moment the question where they should serve would depend upon where they were needed most.

It had not been my intention to attend the July 3 session of the supreme war council, but a telephone message came from Mr. Lloyd George asking me to come. It gave me the opportunity of thanking him for the spirit behind the British purpose to celebrate the Fourth of July with us, on which I had already written him a note. As he sent word through Colonel Lloyd Griscom that he wished to visit some of our units, this was also a chance to extend him an invitation in person.

At this session of the council there was an absence of that tenseness that had prevailed at the last two meetings, the only question discussed while I was present being whether the Belgian army would be under General Foch. The Belgian chief of staff objected on the ground that a king could not be placed under the command of a general.

It did not appear to me that the point was well taken, as in the matter of rank both Haig and Petain were senior to Foch, who, after all, held his place by common agreement. In spite of the technical question of rank, the Belgian authorities, as represented by the king, were strongly in favor of co-operation.

Once the portion of the line to be held by each of the Allies was distinctly defined and the operations to be undertaken by each were agreed upon, Foch might have been called the chief co-ordinator. Each commander-in-chief was superior in his own army, as he had been before, and Foch's task was to co-ordinate the operations of the armies in such a manner as to make it impracticable for the enemy to concentrate against any one. In practice, this was the role he actually played under the provisions of his appointment.

The Fourth of July found me in Chaumont. The French people never missed an opportunity to show their pleasure at having us in their midst and their appreciation of our aid to the cause. The principal ceremony of the day was a reception to the officers of my headquarters by the local French officials, both civil and military, and the prominent citizens at the Hotel de Ville. This was an altogether delightful social gathering, including a series of suitable entertainments.

The spirit of fraternity that prevailed made it easy to respond. In fact, on this, as often on similar occasions, I found myself almost enthusiastic as the French speakers, though perhaps less content with my effort.

The Allies elsewhere did not forget that it was our Independence Day, and messages came from Clemenceau, Foch and Haig and many others from all over France.

Tomorrow: The British, despite Pershing's objections, get our troops into a premature Fourth of July attack.

French Aviators Set 5,470-Mile Record

ORAN, Algeria, March 1.—(AP)—The French aviators, Lucien Boussonnot and Aime Rossi, today broke the record for duration flight in a closed circuit by remaining in the air 75 hours and 23 minutes and covering a distance of 5,470 miles.

The Frenchmen, who took off Thursday morning, bettered the record established last June by the Italian fliers, Maddalena and Cecconi, who remained aloft 67 hours and 13 minutes and covered 5,087 miles.

Boussonnot, a veteran pilot, also holds an altitude record for having flown 3,583 meters (about 11,755 feet) with a load of 5,000 kilograms (about 11,023 pounds). He attempted the first flight from Paris to Dakar, Africa, being forced down in Africa. He was lost for a week.

Rossi formerly was a partner of Joseph Lebrun, another noted French flier.

120-GALLON STILL IS SEIZED IN DEKALB

Negro Captured by Raiding Officers; Two White Operators Escape.

Working under cover of early morning darkness, a raiding party of DeKalb county officers, headed by Sheriff Jake Hall, Sunday morning swooped down on a 120-gallon still about 2 1/2 miles from Lithonia, near Klondike, and caught the plant in full operation.

The officers approached the still, according to Sheriff Hall, and were surrounded it, when one of the moonshiners heard a noise and whistled. The sheriff's party, spread out in fan-like formation, thought it a signal to advance and as a consequence two white men escaped into the darkness. However, Gene Thomas, negro, did not fare so well, and Sunday he was in the jail at Decatur charged with manufacturing whisky. The still itself was destroyed by the officers and 25 gallons of newly-made whisky poured out. Approximately 4,000 gallons of beer mash also were destroyed. This was the fourth still to be taken by the DeKalb law forces during the week. The raiding party was composed of Sheriff Hall and Deputies Claude Ford, L. M. Rogers and Carl Mobley.

Economical hauling for every purpose

The Panel Body. 1 1/2-ton chassis. Wheelbase 131 1/2 inches. A strong and handsome body, with ample loading-space. Outside panels are of steel; inside construction of wood. Double rear doors, opening almost flush with the sides, facilitate loading. An excellent choice for hauling goods that require full protection from the weather.

FOR EVERY business purpose, there is a Ford truck that can ably do the hauling. No matter what the material may be, whether the trips are long or short, the loads heavy, bulky, or light, or if the ground to be covered is paved highway, or rough, rutted and hilly—the Ford offers a choice of bodies and equipment that specifically adapt it to the work.

With the Ford 1 1/2-ton truck, there is a chassis with either 131 1/2 or 157-inch wheelbase. High or low rear-axle gear-ratios are optional. Dual rear wheels are available at small additional cost. Bodies may be equipped with open or closed cabs. There is a large selection of standard bodies, both for the Ford truck, and for the delivery-car, which uses the same chassis as the Model A Ford car.

In addition, bodies and equipment for every purpose, designed especially for Ford chassis, are available. Fitted with a standard body, or with any of the special types, the Ford truck offers ample speed and power, strength, reliability, long life, safety, and economy. In every type of service, its low first cost, and low cost of operation and maintenance, help materially to reduce the cost of hauling.

Baseball Moguls Organize 'Dixie Association' With 8-12 Clubs

EXPERTS PICK 'CATS, BULLDOGS AS FINALISTS

DIXIE BASEBALL HEADS ORGANIZE 8-12 CLUB LOOP

Final Steps To Be Taken in Columbus Next Sunday.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 1.—(P)—From the remnants of three other leagues, the Dixie Association, a new baseball loop, was organized here today with at least eight, and possibly 12 clubs as members.

Invitations were extended to 14 cities in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida to organize clubs and enter the league, organization of which will be completed at a meeting in Columbus, Ga., next Sunday, March 7.

Cities invited, with preference to be given those who had representative at the organization meeting here today, were Jackson and Meridian, Miss.; Anniston, Selma, Dothan and Montgomery, Ala.; Albany, Augusta, Columbus and Macon, Ga.; Pensacola, Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla.; and Greenville, S. C. They include former members of the Southeastern, South Atlantic, Cotton States and Georgia-Alabama leagues which have been given the privilege of seeking a franchise in another league.

A working organization completed here today limited each club to 15 players including the manager; a salary limit of $3,200, including the manager; a $2,500 guarantee to be posted by next Saturday night; each club to contribute $125 weekly to the league and a guarantee of $150 daily to the visiting club.

Cliff Green, president of the Southeastern league through its existence, was named temporary chairman of the new league and Harry Thompson of Montgomery, was named secretary until the officers are elected at the meeting next Sunday.

The meeting here today was attended by representatives from Pensacola, Montgomery, Selma, Columbus, of the Old Southeastern; Macon and Greenville, of the South Atlantic; and Anniston, of the Georgia-Alabama league.

Details of organization were rapidly worked out and it was estimated that a 12-club league, stretching from Greenville, S. C., to Jacksonville, Fla., and extending to the Gulf of Mexico would be formed.

Representatives from every city went home with the declaration that for their cities would be posted before next Saturday night and that at the meeting next Sunday they would be ready to put the finishing touches to the organization.

Some of those present pointed out that the new league would give at least 120 and possibly 180 to the more than 200 ball players without berths this season due to disbanding of minor leagues a chance to play this summer.

Commenting on the new organization, organizers said it would make a strong league with ample backing to carry on through the summer.

Track Card Topped By Three Big Meets

NEW YORK, March 1.—(P)—With all but one of the big invitation track meets and the national championships out of the way, the indoor track season reaches its climax, numerically at least, this week as the college athletes turn out for three big sectional meets.

The tenth annual indoor meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, to be held at New York Saturday, the Southern conference championships at Chapel Hill, N. C., and the Western conference meet at Madison, Wis., have drawn a total of more than 1,100 entries. This number probably will be reduced considerably before the starting gun is fired.

A total of 615 men have been entered for the Intercollegiate A. A. A. meet but probably not more than 300 will start in the 12 events. The Southern meet has drawn more than 350 entries from 16 conference colleges and 40 non-conference schools. About 200 entries are listed for the Big Ten meet.

In addition to these three big championships, the California University games are scheduled to be held at Washington Saturday.

Gene Sarazen Holds Florida Golf Crown

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 1.—(P)—Gene Sarazen, New York professional, today won the Florida west coast open golf championship for the second successive year. Sarazen had a score for the 72 holes of 67-72-68-71—278.

Harry Cooper, Chicago, who carded a 71-72—143 for the first two rounds yesterday, added a 69-69—138 today for a total of 281 to rank second.

In third place came Henri Cluel, Bridgeport, Conn., who shot 69 and 71 in his two rounds today, which combined with his 71-75—146 of yesterday gave him a 285.

Red Maddox Weds Mildred Griffiths

ATHENS, Ga., March 1.—(P)—Ralph (Red) Maddox, junior in the University of Georgia school of journalism and twice All-Southern guard on the Bulldog football team, joined the ranks of the benedictus today, eloping to Anderson, S. C., with Miss Mildred Griffiths, a senior at the university.

Miss Griffiths is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Griffiths, of 295 Hill street, Athens. Maddox is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Maddox, of Douglas, Ga. The couple will reside at the Hill street home of the bride's parents temporarily.

Four conference basketball squads—Florida, Kentucky, Maryland and Georgia—took an old fashioned "much needed" rest Sunday to restore collegiate energy expended in fighting their way through two torrid rounds of the tenth annual championship tournament.

Torrid rounds they were, too. Games have been tighter than Dick's handkerchief.

More than once a single long, looping ball from midcourt that found the basket, or an error in judgment by an official in awarding the ball outside might have completely changed the makeup of the semi-final quartet.

Twelve teams have passed out of the tournament by the narrowest of margins. Therefore the load of grief is great among the defeated. There is more chance to speculate on what might have been and "if only" and "why didn't I" than ordinarily.

Old observers declare that never in the history of the tournament has play been so reckless. The close games have produced a type of fighting basketball that has kept spectators on the verge of hysteria.

Boys have unavoidably collided head on and skidded across the raw pine floor on the sole of their thin pants. They have crashed headlong into the supports that hold the baskets.

Once they pounded a couple of planks loose in the floor. More than one collegiate skull has hit the floor with a thud and the owner has resumed the perpendicular only with a game effort.

SHARP-SHOOTING FIGURES.

For those who want to roll their own dope on the probable winner a few figures on the play of the four semi-finalists to date will be interesting.

Florida and Kentucky, opponents in the upper half, have shown the keenest eye for the basket. Maryland and Georgia, in the lower half, have displayed the best defense.

The following table of field goals attempted, missed, scored and percentages in the two games played shows how the teams rate offensively:

TEAM—	TRIED	MISSED	SCORED	Pct.
Florida	105	73	32	.305
Kentucky	108	75	33	.306
Maryland	99	78	21	.212
Georgia	118	90	28	.237

It is noted that Georgia has taken more shots at the basket than any team in the tournament. That indicates that the Bulldogs are keen at recovering the ball and working it into position to shoot.

Maryland's average is .212 but in the opening game against L. S. U. the Old Liners flicked the netting 16 times out of 46 tries for the remarkable average of .348. In their second game they completely lost their cunning and scored only 5 out 53 for an average of .094.

MORE OF THE SAME.

Presumably Florida and Kentucky, the top pair, are comparatively fresh for their game tonight, for they have won by comparatively comfortable margins.

Florida won her first game by 5 points and the second by 4 points. Kentucky won each game by 5 points.

The Wildcats were forced to exert themselves to the limit to stave off a belated Duke rush in the second round and were badly winded at the finish, but they had piled up an early lead of good proportions and had been under no great mental strain.

Maryland had to hustle in both games. The Old Liners won the first one by 4 points but had to come from far behind to win the second contest from North Carolina by a single field goal.

Georgia, likewise, has been pressed to the very limit of physical and mental endurance to survive. The Bulldogs had to go into an extra period to beat Washington and Lee by 1 point in the opener and came from behind to pass Auburn by 4 points in the second.

These facts may be illuminating in the final tests, for competition plays as important a part in tournament competition as technical skill.

FLORIDA HAS BEST RESERVES.

Florida and Kentucky also seem better supplied with good reserves than Maryland and Georgia. And of the four teams Florida seems best able to substitute without loss of effectiveness. The 'Gator subs fit into the picture perfectly. That factor may enable them to upset Kentucky and go on to win.

Bronston Most Active Guard of Tournament

Picking forwards on "all-tournament" teams is not so hard. One may merely look at the column showing points scored and he a long way toward finding just who ought to make the mythical squad in that position.

The guard positions, however, are a little harder to fill. Being statistically minded and with nothing better to do, our old friend K. N. Count, did a piece of detective work that might be the means of solving this old dilemma.

A guard is supposed to do two things. He should keep the ball out of the opponents' basket and he should intercept the ball and pass it to his teammates further down the floor. The score tells how well he succeeds in the former objective, but in this tournament where scores are so close, that will not tell so very much. Friend Count kept tab of the number of times each player rescued the ball from the enemy and passed it on to his brothers or otherwise profitably disposed of it. Here are the results:

The leading ball hound in this tournament is Bronston, of Kentucky. This boy, known as "No. 21," intercepted the ball 24 times in the game between Duke and Kentucky. Spike, his teammate, was close behind him in this game with 17 interceptions. Other top scorers as follows: McGinnis eight, Yates 2, Worthington 5 and Trotter 7.

BOBBY REACHES COAST TO OPEN PICTURE WORK

Golf Emperor Falls Easily Into Hollywood "Flip" Spirit.

By Brian Bell.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 1.—(P)—Robert T. Jones, Jr., still champion of golf champions in spite of his retirement from competition, reached Hollywood tonight to start on the first of a series of 12 motion pictures, showing how golf shots should and should not be played.

As the man who swept the golf board clean last year arrived, there was some doubt as to when the shooting actually would begin and how long it would take. Jones had some very definite ideas on both subjects.

ANXIOUS TO GO.

"I am anxious to get started," he said, "and I am going into this venture with a lot of enthusiasm. I hope the pictures will do some good and help some golfers. Certainly, I hope they won't hurt anyone."

"As to how long they will take, that is largely up to George Marshall (his director) but I think it should be cleaned up in six weeks, if I don't miss too many shots."

The four-times champion in a year got the Hollywood wide-cracking spirit from the jump. Asked how he approached his task, whether with confidence or apprehension, he replied: "I guess it should be approached with a maslinie niblick, or maybe a niblick."

"I'll start at the green and work back," he said. "The first picture will be on putting and then we'll go from chip shots back up the fairway until we reach the tee."

NOT SO HARD.

"We'll show how we think the shots should be played and give an idea, too, of how they should not be hit."

"Can you make bad shots, too?" he was asked. "Someone else will show the bad shots," he replied, "but don't think I can't."

The greatest golfing Roman of all time appeared in the proverbial blink of an eye as he came back to California after a lapse of more than a year.

He was met at the station by John C. Porter, mayor of Los Angeles, who welcomed him by saying he knew nothing about golf and so was qualified to give a fitting reception.

Bob replied that the mayor might or might not know the game, but that plenty of his fellow-Californians knew how to find their way around the course.

MATCHES PLANNED.

Jones said he would be glad to play in a few exhibition matches for charity.

"I will ask only one thing," he said, "let the matches be for a ball, so I can pick up when I slip."

The newest Hollywood star said he had played more golf since his last championship match than at any period of the same length and enjoyed it more.

"Why," he grinned, "I have even played two rounds with steel-shafted irons, something I never dared to do when I was trying to win championships."

A new golf bag was noted in his baggage. "Yes," he said with another grin, "the old superstition again. You know my old bag was really too disreputable to carry on a course but I didn't dare change when I was playing seriously."

MORE FUN. There could be no doubt that Jones at last was really enjoying his golf. Oh, yes, he said, "I'll try anything now. I'm making experiments all the time and you bet it's a lot of fun."

He was reminded that he said in an interview a year ago he thought he would be able to play "pretty good golf" until he was 40 years of age. Asked if his retirement from competition might stand his golf expectancy a few more years, he said:

"I don't know about how long I may be useful in the over-time session, but I would longer playing for fun than I would trying to win championships."

J. P. C. Five Defeats Chattanooga, 24-22

A long field goal from mid-court, sending looping home by "Kitty" Katz, gave the Jewish Progressive Club, 24-22 victory over the Chattanooga Y. M. H. A. in an extra-period week-end game on the Pryor street court.

Victory carried with it the Jewish championship of the south. The Progressives got off to an early lead but were held closely by the Chattanooga five, who cut the lead to 11-8 at half-time and drew even at 18-18 as the final whistle blew. Both teams counted rapidly in the over-time session, but Katz let fly with 10 seconds to play for the winning points.

Conference Grid Officials Named

There'll be no squabbling about officials for next fall's Southern conference football games. They're already chosen.

Dixie's gridiron coaches met here today and in conference with the Dixie officials' booking agency selected all officials for their contests for 1931.

The most important game for each Saturday, as rated by the priority committee, received first call on the list of officials, and then officials were selected for other games in the order of their importance.

The officials for the various games will not be announced until later.

SPRING SPORTS HOLD ATTENTION OF PREP STARS

Athletes Open Drill on Many Fields This Week.

Prep athletes will turn their attention to a diversified practice program this week in preparation for numerous spring events with inter-league and out-of-town competition. Every sport, with the exception of basketball, which was recently written off the 1931 books, will draw players.

Tech High, Boys' High and G. M. A. will lead the pack with three or four sports each. Others will start training for their particular favorite and it is likely that every prep baseball team will get going before the end of the week.

Baseball is slated to get started at each of the three schools Monday afternoon, while G. M. A. and Boys' High will speed up the track work next Saturday at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Football will be continued at Boys' High, Tech High and Commercial. A call has been sounded for golf candidates at both Boys' High and Tech High for Monday afternoon. The Purples have a veteran team ready for action, but every candidate will be given ample opportunity to make the grade.

Captain Berrien Moore, Charlie Yates, young East Lake stars, and Dodge Metzger, Druid Hills ace, head the list. Bruce Morgan, young West End flash, will set the pace for Tech High this spring.

Tennis and swimming candidates for the Smithie and Purple team will start a hard practice grind this week.

Boxing Spotlight Is Again on South

NEW YORK, March 1.—(P)—The southland again becomes the nation's fistic center this week with a 10-round bout between Primo Carnera and Jimmy Maloney on Thursday night at Miami, Fla. New York's Madison Square Garden offers no competition since the six-day bike race will be on all week but Chicago, Boston and Oakland, Cal., all have shows of better than average caliber.

At Chicago, Duffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Iowa, heavyweight contender, battles King Levinsky, of Chicago, in a 10-rounder at the Stadium Friday night. Boston's for the indoor non-title engagement between Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, and Sammy Fuller, veteran Boston boxer, on Friday.

Henri Cochet Wins Cup at Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, France, March 1.—(P)—Henri Cochet, French Davis cup ace, trounced G. Lylettle Rogers, Irish giant, 6-2, 6-4, in the finals of the Monte Carlo tennis tournament today and thereby enjoyed a good laugh at the expense of experts, most of whom had prophesied his overwhelming defeat.

Lott-Van Ryn Match Postponed by Rains

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 1.—(P)—Intermittent rains today caused postponement of the Pan-American tennis championship finals between George Lott, Chicago, and John Van Ryn, East Orange, N. J., until tomorrow.

Florida Net Tourney Opens at Palm Beach

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 1.—(P)—The twenty-first annual Florida men's singles tennis championship opens here tomorrow at the Palm Beach Tennis Club.

Burning Up Captures Havana Turf Feature

HAVANA, March 1.—(P)—Burning Up, owned by Mrs. E. Denemark, upset the dope today by winning the running of the Cuban Derby, $5,000 added, from the odds-on favorite, Belgian Lass.

Ty Cobb Refuses To Take Default, Wins on Course

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 1.—(P)—Ty Cobb today won a golf tournament, incidentally the first one in which he ever played, after having refused to accept victory by default.

R. H. Daniel, former mayor of Augusta, won the right to face the former baseball star in the finals yesterday of the annual Ben Air-Vanderbilt cup tournament.

Ty was on hand for the contest and waited three hours, but no Mr. Daniel appeared. A telephone call informed Cobb that Daniel was unable to appear because of business and would have to default.

That wasn't Cobb's idea of victory. He insisted on later play. Today Daniel showed up and Cobb demonstrated how golf should be played on the tough Hill course owned by the Augusta Country Club, winning, 2 and 1.

Cobb was 1 down at the turn but on the back nine he shot a median score of 29, only two over par for an 18-hole total of 83. He rimmed the cup with three tries for single puts that would have put him under par 37.

Ty didn't start playing enough golf to count until he retired from baseball.

His Last Campaign

Bobby Dodd, Tennessee's great athlete, is shown pulling off his uniform for the last time. He was photographed after the Tennessee defeat by Florida Saturday afternoon. No Tennessee athlete has worn the Orange and White with more glory than Dodd. He joins the Georgia Tech coaching staff Monday at spring football practice.

Bobby Dodd Will Join Tech Grid Staff Today

Tennessee's Great Athlete Ends Career in Basketball Tourney Here.

By Ralph McGill. Bobby Dodd will join the Georgia Tech coaching staff at spring football practice this afternoon. The greatest athlete the University of Tennessee ever had ended his career Saturday at the Auditorium.

It was rather incongruous that Dodd should end his career in defeat. The Florida basketball team had just swung out in front a few minutes before the gun and held the lead. Defeat and Bobby Dodd rarely met.

"They were too good for us," said Dodd. He was panting. Perspiration dripped from his face. He had put out all he had in an effort to swing his colors out in front. The day before he had done so.

COSSACK SEEKS MAT CARD SPOT

Matros Kirilenko, the Russian Cossack who wrestles Chief Tom Marvin, the Osage heavyweight, at the auditorium Wednesday night, has sent in a strong protest about being placed on a semi-windup card.

It took Matchmaker Henry Weber all of an hour Saturday to prevent Kirilenko from withdrawing from the match.

"I would have given Kirilenko the match with London if the fans here had ever seen him wrestle," said Weber. "I have made it a rule, however, never to match a man in a main event whom the fans have not seen. Sometimes I am forced to, but not often. The fans know that Harper is fast and can give London trouble. If they like Kirilenko I will bring him back. That is, if he beats Marvin."

The chief is the originator of the Continued on Second Sport Page.

Bryan Grant Will Bid For Cup Squad Place

PINEHURST, N. C., March 1.—(AP)—Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, national clay courts tennis champion, said today he had been invited by the United States Lawn Tennis Association to play in the Davis cup team tryouts here in April.

Grant, a freshman at the University of North Carolina, came here to play an exhibition match with Richard Covington, of Asheville. Grant won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

M'GILL SENSES UPSET THREAT IN SEMI-FINALS

Maryland, Florida Pack Punch; Kentucky Given Title Edge.

By Ralph McGill. Kentucky and Georgia in the finals Tuesday night is the word from the basketball experts who have been peering across the hardwood watching 16 teams become four in the tenth Southern conference basketball tournament at the Auditorium.

Florida meets Kentucky in the first game of the semi-finals this evening. Eight o'clock is the hour. Georgia follows with Maryland at 9:15 o'clock.

All this deep thinking by the basketball experts, if indeed, there be any, will not discourage either Maryland or Florida. The experts were saying the same thing weeks before the tournament began.

FLORIDA BOTHERS. Florida's presence in the semi-finals is a deep source of regret to the experts. The excitement of Florida's peering across the hardwood watching 16 teams become four in the tenth Southern conference basketball tournament at the Auditorium.

Georgia is by no means secure. Georgia has had to come from behind in her two tournament games. They were 10 points behind in the half against Washington and Lee. They were 9 points behind Saturday night against Auburn.

Georgia meets Maryland. It so happens that Maryland has been coming from behind to win. They were behind 13 to 1 at one time in the North Carolina game. And won going away.

EARLY HEAT. Both Washington and Lee and Auburn burned themselves out in the first half against Georgia. Their offenses fell off about 90 per cent in the second halves of the games.

Maryland will not burn out in the first half. The Old Liners play in iceburg fashion. The figures show that they have had more shots at the basket than any other team in the semi-finals.

No team in the tournament has two better players than Louis Berger and Ed Ronkin. The Old Liners are a well fortified basketball team.

OTHERWISE OK. With the exception of Florida the experts have done right well. Georgia and Old Kentucky were the pre-tournament favorites. Maryland was the dark horse.

Kentucky and Georgia should meet in the finals. Any other lineup will be something of an upset. And when they do meet Kentucky should win from Georgia. The Blue Grass five seems to be a bit more polished and has shown a better breaking floor game.

Lewis McGinnis, the leading scorer of the tournament, is a better basket threat than any of Georgia's goal shooters. Georgia's average on tries for goals is lower than that of any other team except Maryland. If McGinnis should be hit, as the boys say, he will carry the Wildcats in.

LITTLE TOMMY. Tommy Reeder, a Georgia's best bet. The Bulldogs' great strength, however, lies in the fact that they are all pretty fair basketball players. There isn't a player on the team who approaches greatness. They depend on team play and hustle. And they have that.

Florida, of course, may go right ahead and beat Kentucky. In the basketball tournament there is no way at all to tell what will happen. Florida has made a magnificent record. They had the stamina and the ability for the fast pace of the tournament when teams that had beaten them in schedule play did not have it.

The semi-final games tonight will be worth the price, gentlemen. The play this year is downright bare. Time was when the football men were the boys who die for dear old Rutgers. And now the basketball men are taking the play away from them. They are drawing the tournament games.

FREEMAN WINS. MEXICO CITY, March 1.—(P)—Tommy Freeman, of Arkansas, world's welterweight champion, outpointed Alfredo Garcia of Mexico, in a 10-round non-title bout before 30,000 persons here tonight.

Bryan Grant Will Bid For Cup Squad Place

PINEHURST, N. C., March 1.—(AP)—Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, national clay courts tennis champion, said today he had been invited by the United States Lawn Tennis Association to play in the Davis cup team tryouts here in April.

Grant, a freshman at the University of North Carolina, came here to play an exhibition match with Richard Covington, of Asheville. Grant won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

MCGRAW ADDS NEW RESERVE POWER AFIELD

Giants of 1931 To Be Almost Same as Last Team.

By Gayle Talbot, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer. SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 1. (P)—Superior reserve strength in the outfield and infield alone will distinguish the New York Giants of 1931 from the McGraw clan that started poorly and finished a strong third in last year's National league race.

John J. McGraw, starting his 29th year as skipper of the Gotham nine, is basing his hopes for a pennant on the power of his reserve troops.

Harmon Killebrew, engendered by the fact that the Giants have finished out of the money six straight years, a McGraw record. But he is not predicting a championship—only says do that, he says.

SAME CLUB. Barring holdouts, a subject their portly pilot finds particularly distasteful, the Giants will wade into the race with about the same lineup that appeared in the box scores last September.

Their pitching staff, potentially, measures up to anything in the National league; their catching department will be strongly fortified with two veteran players; their inner works, with the slugging Bill Terry at first, leaves but little to be desired, and their outfield should be stronger than last season's. Not a single player of proved big league caliber was added to the Giant roster during the winter.

Eight veteran slayers, six of whom contrived to win more games than they lost in 1930, form the backbone of the Giant mound corps. Heading the array is Fred Fitzsimmons, who turned in 19 victories while losing 7; Clarence Mitchell, the aged southpaw, with 11 wins and 3 losses last year; Carl Hubbell, whose log registered 17 wins in 29 starts, and Bill Walker, who finished a busy year with 17 victories against 15 defeats, round out a quartet that McGraw is banking on.

Then there is Pete Donohue, former Cincinnati ace, who couldn't quite break even last year; Joe Genewick, Joe Heving and Herbert Pruitt, veterans all. None of the four was overly successful last year but McGraw is optimistic enough to expect them to do better in the impending marathon.

YOUNGSTERS. Heading a promising bunch of new candidates are John Berly, who scored 16 victories for Rochester last year; Roscoe Shepherd, a six-foot six-inch giant who won 12 out of 16 for Memphis, and LeRoy Parnell, a fast ball artist who had a trial year but lacked control. Chief Binder, new mound coach, is putting in much time with Parnell and hopes to make a winner of the big fellow.

With Memphis Bill Terry at first, Hugh Critz at second and Travis Jackson at short, three-fourths of the Giants' infield is settled. Freddie Lindstrom, who has been holding down the hot corner, may be shifted to the outfield and Urban Pickering, drafted from Birmingham, Ala., where he hit .346 last season, given the post.

Eddie Marshall will retain his utility role. Terry will have a fine understudy at first in Sam Leslie, who whammed the ball at a .413 clip for San Antonio last year.

Fred Leach is a fixture in left field, as is Melvin Ott, who clubbed .349 last year, in right. Charles "Chick" Fulle, injured and out most of 1930, is in line for the center field post, displacing Roettger, sold to the Cincinnati Reds. All three can hit and field to suit McGraw. Edman Allen, obtained from Cincinnati last year, drew the first utility role, with a number of promising rookies to fight it out for what's left.

There is no worry for McGraw behind the plate with the veteran Bob O'Farrell and the lusty-tighing Francis Hogan to divide the work.

it on the field. He learned what to do and how.

"I think Georgia Tech has a great coaching find in Bobby. We are sorry to lose him but will watch his career with interest at Tech."

Dodd was not a great basketball player. He hadn't the speed and yet he managed to outplay many who were. No athlete in modern years has had the poise that Dodd possesses. It is this poise plus an uncanny smartness in any competition that makes him so valuable.

ALEX DELIGHTED. "I AM delighted with our coaching staff," said Head Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech. "I believe that Jack Cannon, our new line coach, is one of the finest young coaches I have ever come in contact with. And we are confident that Bobby Dodd will fit right in at that same role. We will turn our backs over to him Monday."

Tech has been going forward slowly in spring practice. Things will speed up this week with the entire coaching staff on duty for the first time this spring.

The first scrimmage is scheduled this week.

chin lock hold, a playful little hold which simply twists the lower part of the jaw one way while the upper part is twisted the other.

He is always unpopular but always in action. No match is dull that the Chief figures in. He gives and he takes.

The main event brings in the champion, Jim Londos. He meets Paul Harper, the Texas heavyweight, in a two-hour contest.

Londos has not appeared here in some time. Since his last match here he has appeared before nearly 50,000 people in two matches in New York to say nothing of large crowds in other cities. It is safe to say that Jim Londos is the greatest attraction wrestling has ever known.

Tickets are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters and at the Candler Building Soda Fountain. Ladies will be admitted to any seat for $1.

As the Big League Teams Get Set

CHAPMAN IMPRESSES. ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 1. (P)—Ben Chapman, one of the doubtful members of the New York Yankees squad, seems to have made a considerable impression on Manager Joe McCarthy by coming to work ahead of time. Chapman turned out with the bat in an attempt to win a permanent job as Yankee second baseman.

"I would not care to express myself so early about any player," McCarthy said today, "but I will say he is a better ball player than I had expected to see. With his speed and throwing ability I am satisfied he will fill the bill at second base."

PIRATES SETTLE DOWN. PABO ROBLES, Cal., March 1. (P)—The Pittsburgh Pirates settled down to the serious business of brushing up for National league pennant racing today.

With all but Paul Wagon, Adam Conorsky, Steve Swetonic and Larry French on hand, Jentz sent this squad through the first real workout of the training season. Jentz decided for two such, Clarence Hair accounted for the first home run of the season, while Vincent Barton slammed out a triple and a single. Errors were plentiful.

ALL TIGERS "IN." SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 1. (P)—The full squad of 33 players was in the Detroit American baseball camp today to the serious business of brushing up for National league pennant racing today.

With all but Paul Wagon, Adam Conorsky, Steve Swetonic and Larry French on hand, Jentz sent this squad through the first real workout of the training season. Jentz decided for two such, Clarence Hair accounted for the first home run of the season, while Vincent Barton slammed out a triple and a single. Errors were plentiful.

CUBS PLAY GAME. AVALON, Cal., March 1. (P)—Manager Rogers Hornsby presented the Chicago Cubs in their first training game of the season today, and a team of regulars overcame the Goofs, 6 to 4.

The regulars scored all their runs off Pat Malone, while the irregulars chipped Guy Bush and Charlie Root for two each. Clarence Hair accounted for the first home run of the season, while Vincent Barton slammed out a triple and a single. Errors were plentiful.

"NO STARS"—JOHNSON. BILLOXI, Miss., March 1. (P)—Walter Johnson has no illusions about his rookie pitchers.

"While I hope some of them will fool me," said the National's leader, "I am afraid none of them will be ready for the majors this season, at least."

All came from leagues of low classification and the jump probably will be too big a one for any of them to clear in one leap."

Of the mainmen who were with the club last year Johnson said he was not worrying over Jones, Crowder, Brown, Liska, Burke, or Fischer. Several of them are slated for plenty of hard work.

AT'S TAKE REST. FORT MYERS, Fla., March 1. (P)—The Philadelphia Athletics were excused from regular drill today and most of them put in the time golfing and fishing.

BROWNS RAINED OUT. WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 1. (P)—A continuous drizzle kept the St. Louis Browns indoors most of today. Marvin Ferrell, 29, brother of Rick Ferrell, the Cleveland Browns, and Wes Ferrell, of Cleveland, was signed today by the Browns for duty with Wichita Falls, Texas. Another brother plays with Buffalo.

PHIL HURLERS LIKED. WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 1. (UP)—Coach Jack Onslow is impressed favorably with the size and actions of the Philadelphia Phillies' pitching staff after working with it four days. "We have the makings of a good staff," he said. "They have the physical equipment to pitch and there are no raw rookies in the bunch. I think they'll have the stuff."

Stoner, Ace Elliott, Jim Elliott, Renge and Scheller appear the furthest advanced.

ROBBY CHANGES SLATE. CLEARWATER, Fla., March 1. (UP)—With the arrival of new players, Manager Wilbert Robinson today announced a new training program for the Brooklyn Robins. The players have been divided into two squads. One will work from 10 to 11:30 a. m., each day and the other from 12:30 to 1 p. m. After luncheon the entire squad will return for a 9-inning game. Robinson will boss the first squad and Jimmy Johnston will handle the reserves.

RED ROSTER FILLS. TAMPA, Fla., March 1. (UP)—Infielders and outfielders joined the Cincinnati Reds' battery here today and held a short practice. All members of the squad except Dessen, Stripp, Ford, Sizemore, Moore and Roettger are now present. Fred Burger, St. Leo College student, was given permission to try for an outfield position.

GIANT SQUAD BOOSTED. SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 1. (UP)—The New York Giants' squad was re-inforced today by the arrival of 10 players, headed by Mel Ott and Hughie Critz, 1930 regulars. Other newcomers included Johnny Vogeis, the coast youngster slated to succeed Fred Lindstrom at third base; Clinton Richmond, Edman Allen, Harry Rosenberger, Urban Pickering, Tom Nash, Jimmy Bryn and Arthur Mansfield.

BRAVES TAKE LAST REST. ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 1. (UP)—Golf, shuffle board and fishing provided recreation today for the Boston Braves' final holiday before the opening of the major league season.

BRASELTON FIVE DEFENDS CROWN IN ATHENS MEET

Chamblee Represents District in Fast Field; Juniors Clash at Y.

Two tournaments will draw the attention of Georgia basketball fans during the coming week.

The annual state high school tournament will be held in Athens Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with winners in each of the 12 districts meets competing.

Atlanta's interests will be centered on the Y. M. C. A. court, where the Southeastern Junior championship will be settled Friday and Saturday.

Chamblee, winner of the annual district tournament Saturday night in the new Clarkston gymnasium, will represent the fifth district in the state tournament in Athens.

Braselton High will defend its state title against one of the "strongest" fields ever to enter a state meet. Braselton defeated Grayson Saturday night and will represent the ninth district.

Other district winners during the week-end were: Brooklet, in the first, Albany in the second, Vienna in the third, Carrollton in the fourth, Thomaston in the fifth, Rome in the seventh, Barnesville in the eighth, Gordon in the tenth, Waynesboro in the eleventh and Perry in the twelfth.

The Y. M. C. A. Juniors, who recently won the city junior championship, will represent Atlanta in the Southeastern tournament Friday at the Y. M. C. A. Other entries are expected from Alabama, Tennessee, Florida and South Carolina.

Manager McKeechne warned his players that they will have practice seven days each week for the balance of the training period. Recruit pitchers are slated for special attention during the five days prior to the opening of the exhibition series, and McKeechne hopes to find several capable of holding regular berths.

CARD PITCHERS ON HAND. BRADENTON, Fla., March 1. (P)—All of Manager Gabby Street's pitchers were accounted for when Sylvester Johnson reached here last night and engaged in his first practice today. He is the 17th player in the squad, which will be augmented tomorrow by the arrival of the main crowd of infielders and outfielders.

There was more rain today but it held off long enough to permit the players to hold a workout in the morning.

THE SPORTLIGHT

THE FIGHTING MYSTERY.

PROVIDED some untoward incident doesn't take place, Primo Carnera, the Fighting Mystery, steps into action this week at Frank Bruen's show in Miami.

Carnera remains a mystery for the simple reason that a lot of people think he can fight a lot, and a lot of others think he can't fight a lick. But he has always lured the populace through the turnstiles, which is the most important feature of any fighter's repertory.

If Carnera puts up a soggy showing against Jimmy Maloney he can point to a cracked rib for his alibi. If he knocks out Maloney or whips him decisively he will be in line then to help clear up the entire heavyweight situation—after this fashion—Schmeling vs. Stripling in Chicago or Cleveland in June. Sharkey vs. Carnera in New York in July.

The two winners to meet in September, New York or Chicago. With the pugilistic industry all cluttered up with static, here is the chance to put on the most interesting summer campaign of many years. For this reason it will probably be passed up.

No sport in the world has been so badly gummed up in every known direction as boxing, including both the top and bottom.

The logical program, but those who could put it through and get the crowds interested once will discover some reason to see that it isn't put through. We have had a flock of eliminations for about two years that meant practically nothing, but with a chance for a real elimination some excuse will be discovered to scramble things up.

Tilden and Richards. WHO is the best of all the professional tennis players? Last fall Vinnie Richards stepped over Karel Kozeluh to win the pro title in an outdoor match. Through the past few weeks Bill Tilden has run Kozeluh ragged. This leaves Richards and Tilden on top of the heap and their meeting this spring or summer will provide one of the best contests of the year.

Richards went into hard and active training early in January. His friends report that he is playing the best tennis of his career. Tilden's sensational play has already been proved in the Kozeluh matches.

The Tilden-Richards match is one of the best of all the naturals. They were amateur rivals ten years ago, and through a long stretch after this Tilden was the master up to 1923 when Richards won three matches out of five starts. They have never met since.

Tilden is now 38 years old and Richards is 27. Ordinarily this would mean the doom of Big Bill, but Big Bill is one of those exceptions who seems to carry his stuff.

Girls Will Seek Title In Monroe Tourney

MONROE, Ga., March 1.—Monroe is to be the scene of the northeast Georgia girls' basketball invitation tournament, March 5, 6 and 7. Eight girls teams with the best records in the season's competition will assemble and play for the northeast Georgia championship.

In the first bracket Madison A. & M. meets Covington High school, and Lavonia meets Monroe High school Thursday afternoon. The second bracket swings into action Thursday night with Georgia Vocational Trades school meeting Young Harris High school and Monticello High school tie-ing up with Eatonton High school. The semi-finals will be played Friday night and the finals Saturday night.

STATE WILL REOPEN BROWNING CASE TODAY

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 1.—(AP) The state planned to resume Monday its case against four men charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Browning last August. The Brownings were slain at their filling station on the main highway between here and the Florida line.

Austin Westberry already has been convicted of the murder. The remaining defendants are Homer Padgett, Allen Westberry, R. Z. Chaney and Travers Ewing, but Solicitor-General G. C. Spurlin has not indicated which of these four will be called to trial first.

Among the more than 200 witnesses summoned, however, are the grand jurors to whom police said Austin Westberry and Padgett confessed conspiring to kill the aged couple. The men have repudiated the confession alleged to have been made to the grand jury. Padgett's attorneys said they would set up an alibi that Padgett was in Florida at the time of the slayings.

Among jurymen drawn in the case are:

H. E. Waller, Lee Fivens, Coma Starling, J. T. Bramlett, P. N. Monk, T. C. Griffin, J. T. Hambrick, K. M. Sims, E. M. Oliver, E. S. Dasher, L. A. Scruggs, L. A. Senterfitt, Robert P. Snow, S. L. The boy was walking on the highway with several other youths, returning from Sunday school, it was said, and ran in front of the car. He was brought to a hospital here.

TWO GEORGIA BROTHERS ARE JAILED FOR KILLING

EASTMAN, Ga., March 1.—(AP) Henry Fuller Sanders, 33, and his brother, Freeman D. Sanders, were held in the Dodge county jail Sunday in connection with the fatal shooting of H. C. Lancaster in Rhine, Ga., last night.

Henry Fuller Sanders claimed self-defense. The brothers called officers after the shooting and surrendered to Sheriff G. C. Rogers.

Lancaster was shot twice with a .32-caliber pistol. Officers said one bullet entered the back of his head and the other struck his arm.

H. F. Sanders told newspapermen at the jail today that he and his brother stopped in Rhine last night on their way by automobile from Sholman to visit their mother, ill in Savannah. He said they inquired where whiskey might be obtained, and a young man whom they did not know offered to find a man who could furnish it. He said they drove to a point near Lancaster home, into which the young man went.

Soon afterward, Sanders said, Lancaster drove up in an automobile and talked to one side with his guide. Then, Sanders said, Lancaster leaped on the running board of their automobile, cursed them and threatened to kill them with the shotgun he was carrying. Freeman Sanders, his brother said, grasped Lancaster's pistol barrel and one, he said, poked the barrel of a shotgun in the car. He did not know whether the shotgun was brought by the man who guided them to the Lancaster home.

H. F. Sanders said he backed the automobile away, with Lancaster still in the running board, for police aid. He said he drew his pistol and fired at Freeman Sanders, who was in the middle of the struggle when he had the weapon with him. Officers had not located the young man alleged to have assisted Lancaster.

George A. Mell, 78,
Succumbs in Athens
ATHENS, Ga., March 1.—George A. Mell, 78, for years prominent in the business, religious and social life of Athens, died at a hospital here Sunday morning at 1:15 o'clock. He became ill two weeks ago.

Mr. Mell was connected with the Athens Savings bank for some time and was cashier at the time the bank was bought by the National Bank of Athens a few years ago.

Mr. Mell was secretary and treasurer of the board of trustees of the Georgia State Teachers' College here, an office which he held at the time of his death. He also was chairman of the board of deacons of the First Baptist church, and a charter member of the Athens Rotary Club.

SAVANNAH HOSPITAL TRANSFER TO BE MADE

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 1.—(AP) Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, secretary of the general hospital board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Fred T. Barnett, assistant secretary, are expected here tomorrow and will attend a meeting Tuesday morning of the executive committee of the board at Savannah hospital.

Formal transfer of the property of the hospital to the Methodist board is expected to take place Monday and plans consummated for the management of the hospital under its new ownership. Extensive changes are to be made in the new hospital, and construction of a modern hospital is expected to begin within a short time.

BEN L. HENDRICKS, 65, SUCCUMBS IN MACON

MACON, Ga., March 1.—(AP) Ben L. Hendricks, 65, until recent years a member of the Macon board of water commissioners and a former city marshal, died at a local hospital early Sunday afternoon from a complication of diseases following an attack of double pneumonia.

Mr. Hendricks was born at Cochran, Ga., and came to Macon about 35 years ago. He served a term as city marshal before his election to the water board. He was chairman of the board for five years.

Mr. Hendricks became ill with influenza 10 days ago and double pneumonia developed. His condition improved after several days, but Saturday became critical.

INFLUENZA IS FATAL TO RUFUS J. ROGERS

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 1.—(AP) Rufus J. Rogers, prominent in educational and court circles and farming in Tattnall county, died today at a local hospital from a relapse from influenza.

Rogers was formerly clerk of the superior court of Tattnall county and a member of the board of education of that county, and at the time of his death was chairman of the board of Reidsville school trustees.

His home was in Reidsville. He is survived by two sons and six daughters. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at Reidsville Methodist church.

Excavating at Fara.

PHILADELPHIA, March 1.—(AP) Announcement was made tonight that an archaeological expedition of the University of Pennsylvania Museum has begun excavations at Fara in Mesopotamia, the site of the ancient Sumerian city of Shuruppak, where archaeologists believe Noah's Ark was built. The site of Fara is in a desert about 100 miles from Ur of the Chaldees.

State Deaths And Funerals

ALFRED W. GOODYEAR. AUGUSTA, Ga., March 1.—Services for Alfred W. Goodyear, 60, who died Saturday in Atlanta, will be conducted at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the St. Paul's Episcopal church here. Interment will be in the Augusta cemetery.

Divorce To Be Subject Of Debate In Athens

ATHENS, Ga., March 1.—(AP) The subject of divorce as a social asset will be debated here March 13 by Swarthmore University, of Pennsylvania, and University of Georgia debating teams. It will be the first time in 20 years that a debate with an eastern university has been held at Athens. The University of Georgia team includes Frank Hawkins, Macon, and Benson C. Pressly, Greenville, S. C.

REV. J. A. MCGARITY PASSES IN MONROE

MONROE, Ga., March 1.—The Rev. J. A. McGarity, 82, well known Methodist minister and prominent Walton county citizen, died at his home at Jersey, 10 miles west of here, early Sunday morning following three days' illness of pneumonia.

The Rev. Mr. McGarity was a minister of the Methodist church for 60 years and served one church, Union chapel, for 20 years.

He was formerly president of the Georgia conference of the Methodist Protestant church and held numerous pastorates while a member of that denomination. He later joined the Methodist Episcopal church. He was a Mason and a Knight of Pythias. He was vice president of the Bank of Jersey for many years and was a leading merchant and farmer. He was born in Carroll county January 11, 1849, but had lived in Walton county since 1877.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, J. L. McGarity, of Monroe, R. E. J. H. and W. H. McGarity, of Jersey; two daughters, Miss Ethel McGarity, of Jersey, and Mrs. Charles S. Floyd, of Loganville, and a brother, B. T. McGarity, of Rockmart.

Funeral rites will be held from the Jersey Methodist church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. J. M. Radford, assisted by the Rev. T. Z. B. Everett and the Rev. E. A. Caldwell, will officiate.

Democratic Committee Sure To Discuss Prohibition Stand

Protests Will Not Deter
Caucus on Question at Meeting in Washington
March 5.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—(AP) New protests were voiced today from democratic congressional leaders against the reported movement to commit the democratic national committee at its meeting here this week to an anti-prohibition stand.

There was every indication tonight that this subject was due for an airing, at least, at the party gathering. Representative Hull, of Tennessee, former democratic national chairman, issued a statement asserting the national committee is without authority "to prescribe issues," and that if the meeting attempted such action "it would be in order for the democratic national convention next year to be dispensed with."

"With southern democrats particularly aroused and both wets and dries in congress opposed to action at this time on the prohibition controversy, Chairman Raskob will come here early this week for preliminary conferences looking to formulation of a satisfactory program."

Raskob has been reported as ready to support a resolution recommending to the democratic national convention a plank for state liquor control as opposed to national prohibition.

The irate democratic leaders in congress who feel this is no time for the party to be dividing on such a controversy will present their views to the committee chairman before Thursday's meeting.

Hull, who will represent Tennessee at the gathering, urged in his statement that the committee "guard itself for the patriotic task of promoting unity and harmony among democrats everywhere, to the end that this great historic organization may next year be fully equipped and prepared to assume these manifold and similar outstanding responsibilities of leadership and service to the nation."

A gathering of the party's national leaders is in prospect. Friends of Alfred E. Smith, 1928 presidential candidate, expect him to attend together with Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, his running mate.

Many of the democratic congressional leaders will be present as the representatives of their states, some with proxies of their national committee-men and others as the committeemen. Hull advocated that the democrats "conduct a crusade for a new birth and revival of the ideas, doctrines and spirit which underlie popular government."

"The breakdown of dominant business and political leadership," he said, "during the past ten years has been so complete as to raise very acutely the issue of popular government. This leadership, including the Hoover administration, was as unconscious of the awful panic 24 hours before it broke in October, 1929, as the inhabitants of the southeast corner of the moon."

"Millions of people are hungry, while American farmers are burning their wheat for fuel."

"Here is presented a huge and most pressing collection of extremely vital economic problems—including both causes and remedies—for solution by the democratic party."

The Oklahoma and Virginia democratic house delegations already have filed protests with their committeemen against commitments of the party at the meeting.

SAVANNAH STRICKEN ON GOLF COURSE, DIES

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 1.—(AP) Clarence H. Ketchum, treasurer of the Carson Naval Stores Company, died on the way to a hospital Sunday afternoon after being taken ill while playing golf on the municipal links. Heart disease is assigned as the cause.

2 ALLEGED 'FRAMERS' OF SLAIN GIRL QUIZZED

Patrolman and Former Husband of Vivian Gordon Put on Grill.

NEW YORK, March 1.—(AP) Two men accused by Vivian Gordon, strangled vice investigation witness, of having conspired to "frame" her arrest eight years ago, were questioned by police today.

They were Patrolman Andrew J. McLaughlin, who made the arrest, and the woman's former husband, John Bischoff, Andover (N. J.) industrial manager of the District of Columbia penal institute at Washington.

McLaughlin was taken to headquarters immediately upon his arrival from Bermuda on the liner California. Dapper, seemingly carefree, McLaughlin said, "Why, I didn't even remember the arrest of the woman."

He emerged smilingly from his conference with Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney and members of the district attorney's staff and said he would return to regular duty.

Bischoff was understood to have been questioned about his knowledge of the woman's past.

"I'll tell plenty," he promised.

Miss Gordon was slain after she had written a letter to city vice investigators promising to tell what she knew of alleged "framing" of women by policemen.

Marking ordinances were: O. D. Gorman, T. C. Fato, Miss T. Brady, C. E. Bolcombe, P. D. Wilson, Albert Arnold, G. G. Stewart and O. A. Gotgen.

Charlie Mandlin, 450 Kennedy street, reckless driving.

Those fined for violations of parking ordinance were: J. E. Wiley, $5, and Madison O'Neal, $4.

Good workmanship in dry cleaning—

real, true cleanliness for your garments
that's why you send dry cleaning to these plants

When you take inventory of your wardrobe for spring, maybe you'll find one or two garments just on the border-line of things good-enough-to-wear. Garments that seem too bedraggled to enjoy, yet not worn enough, nor old enough, to cast aside. In that case, see what an ultra fine job of dry cleaning can do for them.

Only careful, through-and-through dry cleaning can help them—that is the kind you get at these plants. Each garment comes back to you so fresh, so lustrously clean and dainty—you at once have a new respect for it. Dry cleaning does wonders, when it's genuine dry cleaning like this.

ALFRED COLQUITT CHAPTER, U. D. C., MEETS AT PINEBLOOM

Mrs. Arkwright Entertains Chapter Annually in March

Pinebloom, the handsome Druid Hills home of Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright, will be the scene of the meeting of the Alfred H. Colquitt chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at 3 o'clock next Thursday afternoon, following a custom inaugurated one year ago at the meeting of the chapter held at Pinebloom, when the gracious chateleine extended an invitation to the chapter to hold the March meeting each year at her home.

Mrs. Arkwright is the daughter of the late former Governor Alfred H. Colquitt, in whose honor the chapter was named.

Mrs. Josephus Camp, president of the chapter, will preside, and each chairman will be called upon to make a report. Mrs. O. J. Taylor, treasurer, will be present before the meeting is called to order, to collect dues from the members. Mrs. Durand H. Smith, registrar, will assist the new members with their application blanks. Certificates of membership will be presented to Mrs. George P. Howard, Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright, Mrs. Colquitt Carter, Mrs. Robert Whitley and Miss Ellen Newell.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mrs. Douglas Barbour will give the high lights in the lives of the three statesmen, George Washington, John B. Gordon and Alexander H. Stephens. Among the guests invited by the chapter are: Mrs. W. S. Coleman, honorary state president for life, U. D. C., and state director of C. of C.; Mrs. C. M. McCutcheon, president Fulton chapter, U. D. C.; Mrs. L. D. T. Quincy, general chairman Memorial U. D. C. and past president Fulton chapter, U. D. C.; Mrs. D. R. Wilder and Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, past presidents of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., and members of other patriotic organizations in the city.

New Dance Plan Organized in Athens By University Pan-Hellenic Council

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 28.—A new dance plan, organized by the Pan-Hellenic council at a meeting this week at the S. A. E. house, will bring a nationally known orchestra to the University of Georgia for spring dances, formerly known as little commencement. Ellis Arnall, Newnan, is president of the council, and this series of dances will probably be May 1 and 2, and the Georgia State Club, Tech-Georgia baseball games, and Southern Intercollegiate conference golf tournament will furnish entertainment during the week-end.

Ag Club sponsored a square dance at the new Physical Education building Saturday night, and was championed by Professor and Mrs. M. V. Lowry and Professor and Mrs. E. L. Kenner, and sets were called by Joe McGee and Max Brown.

Miss Georgia Jane Vanatter, Athens, and John Carr Branch, Atlanta, a former student of the University of Georgia, were married Saturday, February 21, in Jefferson. They will make their home with the bride's father, P. O. Vanatter, for the present. Misses Rose Harold, Atlanta, and Mary Lizzie Willis, Sylvester, were hostesses to the Zeta Phi Beta chapter, at the regular meeting at Soule hall Tuesday evening. Mrs. Claude Chance, formerly a romance language instructor, talked on the twelfth century French literature, outlining the great authors and great books at that period. After her talk refreshments were served.

The landscape architecture department of the College of Agriculture gave a tea Wednesday at Soule hall, at which an exhibit from the Cambridge school, of Cambridge, Mass., was shown. The exhibit consisted of landscape plans and water color and pencil sketches, by male and female students and faculty members of the school. Tea was poured by Misses Ruth Norris, Atlanta, and Leah Crist, Atlanta, and refreshments were served by Misses Dorothy Davis, Macon; Bunny Porter, Cornelia, and Theresa Hamby, Smyrna. Mrs. Thomas Hubbard McHatten assisted in entertaining.

Professor and Mrs. John E. Drewry, of the school of journalism, entertained a number of the Georgia Press Institute visitors at a dinner Thursday evening preceding the reception at Memorial hall, and Chancellor Charles M. Snelling was host at a sing during Friday evening for some of the institute visitors. Out-of-town guests were Sherwood Anderson, Marion, W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Ehrhard, of the Macon Telegraph; Dr. H. F. Harrington, director of the Medill school of journalism, of Northwestern University; James B. Nevin, editor of the Atlanta Georgian; Miss Emily Woodward, editor of the Vienna News, and Dr. Charles H. Herty, New York.

Atlanta Woman's Club To Sponsor Comic Opera

The costumes and paraphernalia used by the Winthrop Ames Opera Company in its recent production of the "Mikado" in New York, will be used by the Webster and Remington Company of professional Atlanta singers who will present the comic opera sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's Club the latter part of March or the first of April.

The great amount of preparatory work such as arranging, libretto, musical scores, props, costumes and scenery is nearly completed and the actual rehearsals will begin within a week.

Mr. Webster, who is well known for his singing in "Hosonstone" a few seasons ago, will sing the role of Nan-ki-Poo. Supervising of the entire production is in charge of Miss Dorothy Remington, prominent New York actress. There is still one part open and there are vacancies in the ensemble for sopranos, altos, tenors and basses. For the ensemble it is necessary only to have a good natural singing voice. Auditions for applicants are held every Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's Club, 1150 Peachtree street, near Fourteenth.

The literature department of the Atlanta Woman's Club meets Thursday afternoon, March 5, at 3 o'clock in the palm room of the club with the chairman of the department, Mrs. W. F. Melton, presiding. Mrs. Robert Blackburn, a reader of note, will be the principal feature on the afternoon program. An attention is extended to all who are interested in any form of literature to attend this meeting on Thursday afternoon.

Alpha Gamma Delta sorority announces the initiation of the following girls: Misses Clara Strickland, Duluth; Lottie Bailey, Atlanta; Lucy Loflin, Savannah; Lucie Baucus, Atlanta; Celestia Dunlap, Atlanta; Henri Frances Crowder, Griffin; Marion Burns, Carrollton; Marie Holmstead, Washington; Ruth Brien, Atlanta; Augusta, and Augusta Pike, LaGrange.

Captain and Mrs. J. I. Lambert gave a dinner at their home Friday honoring their guests, Captain and Mrs. Vandye Ochs, of Fort Oglethorpe, who were in Athens for the military hall.

Dean T. J. Wootter, of the school of education, and Mrs. Wootter have returned from Florida, and have taken possession of their new home on Dearing street.

Delta Tau Delta members fraternity attended the annual southern division conference of the fraternity, held in Savannah February 19-21, and were: F. C. Tate, Fairmont; R. S. Montgomery, Rome; C. B. A. Redmond, Savannah; O. F. Palmer, Jr., Savannah; G. D. Cope, Savannah; J. H. Cobb, Jr., Savannah; and H. S. McGee, Homerville.

The conference opened with a smoker Thursday evening at the De Soto hotel, during which informal talks were made by Harold D. Meyer, university alumnus and president of the southern division.

Dr. A. S. Edwards, head of the psychology department, addressed the Athens Kiwanis Club on "The Underprivileged and Handicapped Child."

MRS. CARTER RETURNS FROM NEW YORK WITH WAY TO DARKEN HAIR

Gray Disappears Overnight

"What shall I do, my hair is getting gray?" I recommend only one preparation and I've tried them all. It's an improved formula made from that wonderful old recipe of sage tea and sulphur. It is easy to use. Gray disappears overnight. And after two or three applications hair is restored to the exact shade you want, so even, so naturally, nobody'll ever know. Just pay your druggist 75c for a large bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and follow the simple directions.—(adv.)

Garden Club of Georgia Convenes In Savannah April 13 and 14

Third annual convention of the Garden Club of Georgia meets in Savannah April 13-14. Mrs. Joseph McKnight Speer, of Augusta, president, will preside at the sessions and presidents and representatives of the 61 member clubs will be in attendance.

Trustees Garden Club, of which Mrs. Clarence Anderson is president, and the Garden Club of Savannah, with James B. Copes, president, will be hosts for the convention for which an attractive program is being arranged. Clubs desiring to join the state organization must make application to the admission chairman, Mrs. W. D. Hooper, 120 Milledge terrace, Athens, before the first of April. To be eligible a garden club shall have been organized at least one year, have a minimum of 15 active members; and be proposed by one member club and endorsed by two other member clubs. Applications for the wild flower award offered by Mrs. R. L. Cooney, honorary president of the Garden Club of Georgia, must be received by Mrs. Cooney, 1310 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, by April 1. This award is for the greatest variety of wild flowers grown by the individual member of a member club and includes the wild flowers of any part of the country, whether grown in the city garden or the country place.

Contestants for the achievement medal presented by the Peachtree Garden Club, Atlanta, must send their reports to Mrs. James D. Robinson, 1325 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, by April 1. The medal is given for the outstanding achievement of the year in some phase of gardening to a member of the Garden Club of Georgia. All members are eligible to compete for these awards whose garden clubs are members of the state club, including those clubs that have recently joined the state club. Dues of a member club must be paid by March 1 for a club to be in good standing. Send dues for 1931 to the treasurer, Mrs. Cooper Newton, Griffin, and also send to Mrs. Newton the number of members in the club, as the number of members in each club is wanted for information before the convention.

Garrison Activities Revolve Around Visitors at Post

FORT McPHERSON, Ga., March 1.—Visitors and members of the Garrison who are leaving soon for change of station are centering the social spotlight and the dinner-dance to be given at the Officers' Club Friday evening, March 13, in the interest of the military set. A number of dinner parties are being planned to take place that evening and congenial groups will gather at the tables placed around the dance floor. Brigadier General George H. Estes and Mrs. Estes, Colonel Clyde C. Abraham and Mrs. Abraham, Captain David E. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler, and Lieutenant Walter Scott Winn, Jr., and Mrs. Winn will entertain at the dinner-dance.

An event of interest of Tuesday evening will be the dinner-dance to be given by Colonel Louis M. Fittman, commanding officer of the 22d Infantry, at the Fort McPherston Officers' Club. Covers will be placed for 50 members of the military and civilian contingent. A special guest will be Mrs. James B. Golden, of Front Royal, Va., who has been the guest of her father, Colonel Fittman, and of Miss Berneice Fiske at her home in the Capital Park.

Major Ralph Holliday and Mrs. Holliday will have their next week end their sister, Mrs. Smead of Greenfield, Mass. Mrs. Smead will be the central figure at a number of social affairs during her stay at the post.

Colonel Walter F. Bates and Mrs. Bates are anticipating the arrival of their daughter, Mrs. Edwin M.

Hughes, and her small daughter, Peggy, of Kentucky, who will come Monday for a visit. Mrs. Bates visited Colonel Bates and Mrs. Bates in the early fall and has a host of friends in military circles who will be interested in her arrival.

Brigadier General George H. Estes and Mrs. Estes were hosts at dinner at their quarters Friday evening in honor of Captain Joseph O. Ensrud and Mrs. Ensrud. The table was set for motor trip before going to their new station in Panama. Covers were placed for ten members of the military contingent.

Colonel Clyde C. Abraham and Mrs. Abraham entertained at dinner the same evening for 14 members of the military set. The table was decorated with pink roses and white snapdragons, and slender ivory tapers were placed at intervals.

Captain Lewis L. Tanny and Mrs. Tanny entertained at dinner Friday evening at their quarters when covers were placed for 14 guests, including members of the army group.

Mrs. George Woodard entertained at luncheon at her quarters Friday in honor of her mother, Mrs. Echels, of Philadelphia, Pa. Covers were placed for a group of the army contingent.

Major B. G. Ferris and Mrs. Ferris, accompanied by their son, Sumner, of Fort Benning, were the guests of Colonel Clyde C. Abraham and Mrs. Abraham for the coming week-end.

The drag hunt given Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Candler at their country place, Lullwater Farm, was followed by a group of the army contingent.

Atlanta League of Women Voters Executive Board Meets Tuesday

March meeting of the executive board of the Atlanta League of Women Voters will be held Tuesday morning at league headquarters at 10 o'clock. Besides the regular business of the organization, there will be a discussion of the city democratic committee and plans for a possible primary some time this year. The League of Women Voters undertakes to give its members through its publication, Facts, non-partisan political information necessary for the casting of an intelligent vote, and in line with such a program, it is desirable to know what elections are scheduled and what officials are to be elected, as well as a knowledge of the records of the candidates.

Immediately following the board meeting there will be a luncheon at the Piedmont hotel at 12:30 o'clock. When W. Henry Smith, of the State Credit Association, will speak on the unemployment situation in Atlanta and in other cities, and will discuss how such conditions may be prevented.

American Colonists Name Delegates

Executive board of the Georgia Society, Daughters of the American Colonists, was entertained at the home of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. Harold Nicholson, 11 Peachtree way, Friday morning. The home was sprinkled in its decoration of jonquils, which had been sent from Thurston, the home in Madison of Misses Bessie and Daisy Butler, aunts of the hostess.

Mrs. W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie, was an out-of-town board member present. Delegates and alternates were elected to the national congress in Washington as follows: Mrs. Howard McCall, Atlanta; Mrs. Richard Moore, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Bert A. Tyler, Dalton; Mrs. N. J. Wynn, Atlanta; Mrs. W. C. Vereen, Moultrie; Mrs. H. Lane Young, Atlanta. Alternates: Mrs. W. L. Barnes, Atlanta; Mrs. Julian T. Talmadge, Athens; Mrs. Charles Love, Atlanta; Mrs. Eli Thomas, Atlanta; Mrs. J. W. Bateman, Atlanta; Mrs. Ed Herron, Dalton; Mrs. John Rice, Atlanta; Mrs. James O. Winn, Atlanta; Mrs. J. E. Satterfield, Macon; Mrs. W. J. Vereen, Moultrie.

All state officers are also eligible to represent the society at the national meeting. The state regent, Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, has been endorsed by the Georgia society for the office of vice president general of the southern section.

Morningside Meets.

The mothers of Morningside school met Wednesday and organized a preschool circle with Mrs. Alvin L. Chason as chairman. Mrs. N. J. Wynn, chairman of all the Atlanta preschool work, gave an outline of the work planned.

Mrs. George Hiles was elected secretary, and Mrs. J. H. Alderman, treasurer. Mrs. T. C. Bazemore read an interesting article on preschool education.

Mrs. W. P. Bell, who has agreed to teach the study class, comes from Iowa State University. The class meets each fourth Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock in the school building.

Young Wife Happy Now

"Before my little daughter was born I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly. I was able to do my usual work and take pleasure in doing it. We were so happy when a wonderfully fine baby girl arrived to bless our home. I have enjoyed better health since the baby's birth than ever before. I am sure that I owe it all to your medicine and I heartily recommend it to all women who are weak or ailing."—Mrs. Chester Decker, R. R. #1, Wheatland, Indiana.

Ahavath Achim Sisterhood Plans Purim Celebration

Ahavath Achim Sisterhood will hold its March meeting at 8 o'clock this evening at the Jewish Educational Alliance, 318 Capitol avenue, S. E., in the form of a Purim celebration. The meeting will be opened with a prayer by Rabbi Harry Epstein and a short address of welcome by the president of the Sisterhood, Mrs. D. N. Meyer.

After a short business session, which will be condensed as much as possible in order to allow time for the program, the meeting will be turned over to Mrs. S. L. Leaf, who as program chairman has prepared an appropriate entertainment in keeping with the Purim festival and which will be enacted entirely by the children of the Sunday school. The program will unfold a complete dramatization of the life of Queen Esther and will include a dance by the smaller children, the "Dance of the Court Jesters."

Max Cuba, superintendent of the Sunday school, will introduce the members of the faculty. The program will be closed with a song by Mrs. S. O. Klotz, "The Song of the Sisterhood."

The sisterhood has always considered the sponsoring of the Sunday school its first duty, every possible effort being made each year to give the children the best facilities in every educational improvement. This open meeting will serve as a welcome opportunity to introduce to the parents just what is being done, and under what conditions their children are receiving their Jewish education.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

If a Man Attempts to Police His Sweetheart He Will End by Putting His Wife in Jail With a Life Sentence—Affection Cannot Be Gotten; It Must Be Given.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: I have been going with an exceptionally nice young man for three months. I am in love with him but the question is: Does he love me? He says he loves me and wants to marry me after his graduation in June. However, he is constantly reminding me that if I ever should "lose my taste" for him or cause him to "lose his taste" for me he would go back to the girl he was in love with before he met me. He had been in love with her for three years and engaged to her part of that time. They quarreled and when he was angry with her he began to come to see me. She has done her best to get him back and has even threatened him several times. He contends he loves me best although he admits he has a sort of tender feeling for her. It seems to me if he really loved me he wouldn't be so strict with me and so jealous of me. He is continually referring to things that happened before I knew him, in an accusing way, and the thing that makes me maddest is the threat that ends every accusation, "I will go back to her if you ever do that again." Yet he wants to come every night. He often takes me to see his family and gives them to understand that we are engaged to be married. Do you think he loves me?

ANSWER: My dear young woman, I wouldn't begin to say the young man doesn't love you. Does he love me? He says he loves me and wants to marry me after his graduation in June. However, he is constantly reminding me that if I ever should "lose my taste" for him or cause him to "lose his taste" for me he would go back to the girl he was in love with before he met me. He had been in love with her for three years and engaged to her part of that time. They quarreled and when he was angry with her he began to come to see me. She has done her best to get him back and has even threatened him several times. He contends he loves me best although he admits he has a sort of tender feeling for her. It seems to me if he really loved me he wouldn't be so strict with me and so jealous of me. He is continually referring to things that happened before I knew him, in an accusing way, and the thing that makes me maddest is the threat that ends every accusation, "I will go back to her if you ever do that again." Yet he wants to come every night. He often takes me to see his family and gives them to understand that we are engaged to be married. Do you think he loves me?

Any one of these traits is enough to blight a woman's life unless she be wise. Jealousy is something over which a sweetheart or a wife has no control. It mounts like a fire burning in a two-storyed frame house. Before marriage you only detect a little smoke in the basement, but after marriage you shall see the angry flames lick the whole structure of your common life.

Love doesn't give the lover the authority to police his sweetheart's life. Nor does it give the vindictive spirit that manifests itself in threats. Voluntary surrender is the only accounting that love allows and voluntary penance is the only penance that is worth taking into account. If a man attempts to police his sweetheart he will end by putting his wife in jail, with a life sentence.

As if the present didn't furnish this young man ample opportunity to show up all his Satanic characteristics, he is thrusting his hand into the past to see if he cannot fetch up something about which he is disgraced. Of course he can. The most discreet woman cannot order her life to suit a jealous man. And if she allows it she may spend the rest of her days contending with him about affairs that are none of his business.

That is quite enough philosophy about the dangers that lurk in this particular path. And now to some practical suggestions as to how to meet them. You have allowed a young man to "get his foot on your neck" and before you finish with him you are going to have one of the sorest necks a woman ever had. It is barely possible that it is the only way you can get along with him. If he is worth that price to you, pay it and don't complain. If he is not, then proceed to shake off that foot.

First of all, tell the young man that he has nothing to do with your life prior to the time he entered it, and that you will not hear one other criticism from him. Tell him that you leave him perfectly free to go back to the first girl if he cares to do so but that he must make up his mind definitely concerning her and once it is done you will not allow him to threaten you with her again. The young man cannot repudiate a woman who allows him to humiliate her. The bully in him drives him to what he does but the manhood in him expects her to resist it. You gain nothing by humbling yourself to accept such an indignity and you lose your self respect. When you do you forfeit his.

I'll wager the young man doesn't try any of these high-handed methods on his college mates. Men who treat women in this fashion are not brave. They are not kind and considerate. The bully women because they haven't strength to bully men.

One last warning: If the relation between two lovers is not happy the marriage of those lovers will be 75 per cent less happy. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: I am 17 and go with a boy the same age. He seems to care for me a little bit but there is another girl in the case. She is just a little bit better than I am. I am a friend of mine at one time. What would you do to get more of his affection? LONESOME.

ANSWER: Wait for him to give it. That is the only thing you can do. You can't get affection from an unwilling giver. Don't show your jealousy. That would be the quickest and most effective way of cooking your goose.

Put some other boys "in the case." It is absurd for a girl of 17 to settle down to interest in one boy. Nothing sets a girl off like popularity. Nothing sets her down like confining herself to one town and now he corresponds with her regularly. I am awfully jealous of her. She was a friend of mine at one time. What would you do to get more of his affection? LONESOME.

The surprise will do him good. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Literary Department Of Civic Club Meets Wednesday

The literary department of the Civic Club of West End, Mrs. W. L. Clark, chairman, meets Wednesday, March 4, at 3 o'clock in the auditorium. The program will commemorate the life and work of Ernest Hartsock, noted young poet of Atlanta, who passed away last December after establishing for himself a place in the halls of fame. Mrs. Roger Lively, who will present the program, will read one of the poet's favorite poems, and Mrs. Edward Hardway Smith will give a history of his life.

Mrs. E. A. Hartsock, mother of Mr. Hartsock, will be present as the guest of honor. Mrs. P. D. Johnson will direct a discussion of current events.

Mrs. Murray Howard, honorary life president of the club, entertained at luncheon Thursday, February 28, honoring the members of the advisory board of which she is chairman. Preceding the lunch hour a brief business session was held at which time plans were made for a unique bridge party for Wednesday, March 4, at 3 o'clock at the clubhouse. Mrs. Howard's guests included Mesdames L. A. Hollingsworth, Arthur J. Merrill, Edward L. Smith, Jesse Manly, J. H. Savage, A. L. Smith and Horace Presson.

The meeting Wednesday, February 28, lively, was the fact that the work was the outstanding achievement of the organization during the past year. The social life of the club has been emphasized during the administration of Mrs. L. A. Hollingsworth. Mrs. M. Herzberg, chairman of motion pictures, and Mrs. F. Perkins, delegate to the National District institute, made interesting reports. Mrs. George Hinman gave an instructive lecture on art in which she brought out the superiority of modern art by carefully selected copies of both the modern and historical types. Martha Livingston, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lon Livingston, rendered two classical piano numbers in a finished manner.

The presidents and chairmen of the garden divisions of the Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs were entertained at the Civic Club Friday, March 27. After the business meeting a social luncheon was served by the garden department of the hostess club.

National and International Officials Survey Atlanta Girl Scout Activities

On a recent visitation to the Atlanta Girl Scout organization by national and international officials a survey of the activities in girl scouting was made. Miss Joyce Welton, of London, England, the leader of training in leadership of the English Girl Guides, writes to Mrs. William F. Taley, director of Atlanta Girl Scouts, commenting upon the fine quality of leadership shown by the young women who are directing the Girl Scout troops in Atlanta. Miss Olive McCormick, of the national camp staff from New York city, inspected Camp Civitania and states that the physical outlay is one of the finest in the country and the program offered the campers satisfactorily meets the national standards. Miss Jane Wharton, secretary of the national field department, conferred with Mrs. Frank Holland and the local council in making plans for the coming three years of scouting in Atlanta. Atlanta is one of the outstanding councils in the country in the achievement of high ranks by the girls in scouting.

Coterie Club Will Present 'The Last Jew'

David Pinsky's celebrated play, "The Last Jew," will be presented for the first time in Atlanta by the Coterie Club, a Young Judean club of this city, at the Jewish Educational Alliance, 318 Capitol avenue, Sunday evening, March 15, at 8 o'clock, under the direction of Mrs. Mord G. Foote.

The author is one of the most famous of contemporary Jewish playwrights. "The Last Jew" is one of David Pinsky's outstanding four-act dramas. The theme of the story, which takes place during a very trying time for the Jews, is centered around the struggles of an old rabbi who places the synagogue and the holy scrolls above everything else in the life of the Jews. In the play the views of the Zionist, the Utopian, and the Assimilator are portrayed in wonderful fashion.

The cast includes Miss Ozna Tontak, Miss Rosalie Hirsch, Miss Sara Gharston and Ned Cohen, Simon Wender, Nana Cohen, Meyer Levy, Louis Berchenko, Ed Vajda, Max Rittenbaum, Melvin Weiman, Oscar Finerman and Joe Bass. Tickets may be secured from any member of the cast.

Mr. McCoy Is Host.

Miss Alpha Daniel and Eugene L. Gilbert, Jr., of New York city, whose names will be an interesting social event taking place next Wednesday, will be honor guests at the dinner at which Irvin McCoy will be host this evening at his home in Ansley park.

Manhattan Night

By William Almon Wolff

INSTALLMENT XXI.

Their questions were like the hail of bullets from a machine gun. Where was Mrs. Thayer? (So Connolly hadn't let that out! Good for him!) Did he know about the rumor of a quarrel in which Mr. Thayer had been involved with Evan Ross and Mrs. Thayer? Was it true that Mr. and Mrs. Thayer had been considering a divorce? Did he know this—and that—and the other thing?

"I'm sorry," said Peter. "The answer's no—every time. As far as I know, I mean. I don't know a thing. Mrs. Thayer found—well, you know what she found. And she started telephoning, and I happened to be the first one of my friends who answered. What? No—I don't know whether she'd tried any one else first, or not. I didn't ask her a lot of questions, you know. The police were doing that. And you can guess how much they told me! You can probably get a lot more out of them than I could."

The reporters looked at him, disappointedly. From their point of view Peter was turning out badly, very badly. Reporters cherish a profound dislike—professionally and journalistically—that is—for people who speak pleasantly and keep their tempers under questioning. They know exactly how to handle people who sullenly refuse to speak, or those who explode into abusive language.

"Do you mind telling us where you're going now, Mr. Wayne?" asked one of the crowd.

"Not at all," said Peter. "I'm going downtown to have lunch with my brother-in-law. I hope he's going to take me to the Lawyer's Club. Depends on how generous he's feeling, though. Can I give any of you a lift? I'm taking a taxi."

They declined, but, looking back, he saw another cab following him. Steve laughed when Peter told him he'd been trailed.

"Of course," he said. "That's routine. You'll be shadowed as long as this murder's on the first page. Don't worry. We're meeting Bouton and Prentice upstairs at the club for lunch, and we won't go out together."

Bouton was a tall, quiet man, with thin lips and cold, blue eyes, who was a listener, rather than a talker. He remembered Mitchell, he said, and listened with marked interest to Peter's report of his visit; so did Steve and Prentice.

"That's very good," he said. "I know the man. He's had rather a raw deal. Connolly's rather a stuffed shirt—though he's no fool, by any means. I've an idea Mitchell's right—that we'll have to depend on you to dig up some facts for us, Wayne. Assuming that Mrs. Thayer and Ross had nothing to do with the shooting, it's obvious that there are factors that haven't come out at all, that aren't even suspected."

"Even if Ross did do the killing—and I don't think we can wholly eliminate Mitchell's suggestion that he could have done it, in that hour he was away from Sanborn's—his motive isn't clear."

"Assume that he did shoot Thayer, just for the sake of argument. Why? Not because he was afraid of Thayer's jealousy—nor to clear his own way to marry Mrs. Thayer. Regardless of Thayer, they weren't in a position to marry, I imagine, according to the standards. And Mrs. Thayer is worse off financially, as a result of her husband's death. That's so, isn't it, Prentice?"

"Decidedly," said Prentice. "Martha and Tack came down and talked to me about a divorce, rather more than a year ago—when, by the way, so far as I know, Ross wasn't involved at all. They were simply both tired of a marriage that hadn't been a marriage at all for a long time."

"The boy was extremely decent, and he went into his finances with me very fully. Aside from his salary of ten thousand—all he had to dispose of was an income from a trust fund, that came to a little more than five thousand a year. And his mother had laid down the law. If there was a divorce she'd cut off all supplies, and what was more, he'd lose his job. She practically controls Thayer, Hibben, you see—she could get him thrown out. Martha comes in for that trust fund—he made a will, leaving it to her. But she hasn't a chance of ever getting a penny of old Mrs. Thayer's money. And she's got about fifteen hundred a year of her own."

"What's Ross make, on a guess, Peter?" asked Wentworth.

"Fifty a week—seventy-five at the outside," said Peter. "What's this about his having cleared out? I didn't have a chance to get a paper."

"Seems to be straight," said Bouton. "Connolly tried to get hold of Ross to question him, but Ross had been in and changed his clothes—right after he left Mrs. Thayer at her place, apparently—and then gone out again, with a bag. There's a general alarm out for him now. It looks bad. I don't like it."

"Warrant?" asked Prentice.

"No. Connolly's going slow. Says he wants him as a material witness. We're getting a break from the way Connolly's stalling—though there's a catch in that, too, probably. He's got enough to make arrests—no doubt of that."

Peter wasn't enjoying his food. He knew that this precise, cold-blooded, impersonal sort of talk was necessary, but he hated it.

"Well," Bouton was looking at his watch.

"Wayne, I wish you'd find out as much as you can about every one involved. There may be a lead of some sort in this affair Ross seems to have been carrying on with this Rita Gould. And who was particularly in Mrs. Thayer's confidence—aside from yourself? She seems to have talked quite freely to you, luckily."

Peter wondered, rather wretchedly, whether Martha was going to think so, when she found out how much he'd told.

"I don't know," he said, slowly. "She's not the sort to talk much to girls, I think. Of course, there's Dr. Kahn. She's been going to him."

"The psychoanalyst?" said Bouton. "Good man. But we won't get much out of him. Him. Anything you haven't told me?"

Peter, with a start, remembered the episode of the bracelet, the first night he'd met Martha, and the $500 he'd given to Bouton for her, in his place. He hadn't told anyone about that; Charley Mitchell, or Steve, or anyone else. Now, rather guiltily, he did.

"That's interesting," said Bouton. "I'll have to go after Mrs. Thayer about that. Emma's, eh? I know the place. Sounds like blackmail."

He shook his head. "I'm afraid we'll uncover some unpleasant things before we're done with this affair. Well—that's all for now. I think. I'll be up to see Mrs. Thayer in the morning. Steve, tonight, for that matter, if Watson gives the word. The sooner the better."

Peter went off after lunch feeling curiously and unhappily at a loose end. Both Charley Mitchell and Bouton, in almost the same terms, had put it up to him to learn something that would tend to clear Martha by solving the mystery of who had actually killed Tack Thayer. But it was a lot easier, obviously, for them to put him to work than to tell him how to go about it.

He went in to the Yale Club later and buried himself in the evening papers. He had already a uncomfortable feeling that he was being stared at. And—good Lord, if he felt that what was it going to be like for Martha? No one suspected him of having killed Tack.

The papers told him nothing he didn't know. It was gruesome work, reading them; seeing pictures of Martha and Tack, and of their place; it was a maddening business, reading the sly, insinuating paragraphs in the yellowed rag.

The case was a godsend to them.

About 6 o'clock he couldn't stand his own company, the sense of futility that oppressed him, any longer. He walked up Park avenue, slowly, toward the Park. With a morbid fascination he looked around; yes, there were men waiting, purposefully, with bland eyes, who corresponded perfectly to Charley Mitchell's description of his fellow detectives. But there were no newspapermen; Connolly, so far, had spared them that, at least.

"A population of 500,000 by 1935" is Atlanta's slogan. Let's all pull together for a Greater Atlanta.

THE CONSTITUTION'S WEEKLY BUSINESS REVIEW

EDITED BY M. D. GLEASON.

There is hardly a need or a want that cannot be filled in Atlanta's stores and factories.

MILK DIET ADVISED TO RESIST DISEASE

The members of the Georgia Pure Milk League have been in a position to know the full extent of flu in Atlanta and vicinity, a visit to the dairy farms indicated.

A. S. Nance, one of the leaders, says "the reports from our members all around Atlanta show that many of their long-time friends and customers have had sickness in their homes and in special cases they are furnishing fresh sweet milk that is just milked."

"We are all of the opinion that this is a time when children and old folks should be given plenty of clean, wholesome, fresh sweet milk, in order that they may build up their resistance and be better able to ward off flu and other diseases."

Mr. Nance has a splendid, modern dairy, in the Ben Hill section where he milks 36 cows, and delivers his milk to West End, East Point and College Park. His barns and well drained lands provide the background for a fine dairy.

In addition to his Fulton county dairy, Mr. Nance has 150 acres of fine farm land near Acworth, Ga., where he has 35 more young cows and heifers that he is raising to supplement his herd near East Point. He also raises all his feed for both herds at the Acworth farm, having much of it in rice, oats and vetch, and more acres being plowed at this time to plant corn, soy beans and alfalfa hay.

J. L. Porter, in DeKalb county, near the Candler road, was next seen. "People should give more serious consideration to their foods in times when much sickness is about, and remember that for ages, the best doctors have been recommending pure sweet milk as nature's best food to build healthy bodies."

Mr. Porter milks 37 cows and delivers his milk to the people in Decatur and the North Side of Atlanta. He has an ideal drained farm, with splendid barns and raises most all of his own feed.

B. M. Gresham, treasurer of the Georgia Pure Milk League, who has his dairy on the Gresham road, in the southeastern part of Fulton county, says, "Our members that are supplying Atlanta with Grade A natural milk from all sides of Atlanta, are telling us that much sickness has prevailed among their customers during the past month and invariably the recommendation from their family physician is to give the patients more sweet milk and less solid foods."

Mr. Gresham milks about 30 choice cows and delivers most of his milk on the North Side of Atlanta. He takes such pride and care of his cows that he has two barns for his herd; one where they sleep in straw at night and a milk barn where they are washed, fed and milked.

Out on the Briarcliff road, C. C. Tuggle, vice president of the Georgia Pure Milk League, has 66 acres of fine land that is well drained and here he maintains a fine herd of Jersey and Holstein cows that produce the rich, natural milk he delivers to his many customers in Druid Hills and Ansley Park.

NEW PATTERNS SHOWN IN AWNING STRIPES

J. D. Couch, vice president of the Atlanta Tent & Awning Company, announces that the new Vivatone woven awning stripes they are introducing to the southland this year is an awning pattern that will appeal to those who want an awning that will lend life and harmony to their homes, besides just being a protection from the sun and rain.

"We are more than pleased to show our Vivatone line this spring to the people of our section," further stated Mr. Couch, "and we feel that we can truly help every woman that loves a beautiful home to add much to the expense of making the outside of her house portray the fact that she also has a beautiful furnished home inside."

"Old, dirty or torn awnings hardly fit in this day or time with dainty curtains, charming upholstery covers, beautiful rugs or fine furniture, and yet the awnings on the outside are seen by thousands, where the furnishings on the inside are seen only by the few."

In these new Vivatone awnings we give every woman, be she tenant or homeowner, the opportunity of showing the influence of her originality in selecting the particular pattern that best fits in and harmonizes with her home and its surroundings. Where a person's taste and means allow, we are offering some of the finest awning material ever seen in this country, and, as usual, our Atlanta and Georgia friends and old customers will get the best and latest in new awnings.

"We also think it wise to call the attention to all those who contemplate buying awnings this year to buy them before the spring rush is on, so that we may give each individual home or building owner the individual attention we like to give all our customers when we have the time, and then again where awnings are put up early they give a longer season's service in protecting the home from the sun's glare and the early spring rains."

"We are also happy to announce," concluded Mr. Couch, "that B. M. Gresham has again returned to us after an absence of some years, and with the added experience he has obtained he is now better able to serve all old and new friends in his connection with us."

BUSINESS COLLEGE REPORTS ADVANCE

Miss E. Katherine Reid, manager of Crichton's Business College, says that the wave of depression that rolled over the country last year passed them by and that they, as well as many of their students are better off, mainly due to the depression itself.

"Many people," continued Miss Reid, "were employed in various ways that were not altogether congenial for them, but due to the fact that they had a fairly good position they did not like to take the chances of quitting it to look for something better, but when they were let out, due to slack business of the firm they were with they then took advantage of their own idle time to better fit themselves for the kind of work they like best to do."

"We are constantly watching for means of increasing the efficiency of our students, as well as serving the needs of those applying to us for our help. We make every effort to be of real service by endeavoring to meet the definite demands of the employer with a student especially qualified for a particular position. The individual attention we give students throughout their course affords us an opportunity to study the ability and progress of each pupil very closely."

"It has been very gratifying to us to learn that so many young women and men who formerly were working at some position where the hours were long and the work was hard, were now known they are in positions where their own talents can better be appreciated and the salary remuneration much better, all due to taking a brief course in our business college."

"As all authorities are agreeing, there are signs of gradual improvement in the business world, it stands to reason that those who are trained to be appreciated and having the very latest in school equipment that harmonizes with the splendid building in which it is being used, the students here study under the most favorable conditions."

Miss Reid, who was first assistant to Professor Crichton for several years, has, since his passing, carried on this business college, retaining the best of his famous methods and adding to it the world's latest methods of best fitting the student for modern business life.

She has surrounded herself with a corps of efficient teachers, and in this way, students may enroll at any time and will receive individual instruction that will enable them to complete the particular course they may desire to become proficient in, in a few months' time.

ACREAGE OFFERING PROVES ATTRACTIVE

A client of the Lipscomb-Weyman-Chapman Company has recently acquired a tract of 52 acres facing on the East Point road which connects the Campbellton road with Chattahoochee avenue. The party has subdivided this tract into five and ten acre homesteads which he is offering at prices ranging from $500 to $2,000 per tract.

A great deal of interest has been manifested in this development due to a desire on the part of many people to have a large garden plot and keep chickens. Several of these tracts have already been sold to people who are starting improvements in the near future.

ENVELOPES CLAIMING MORE CONSIDERATION
That the matter of appearance and performance of any merchandise is something given too little attention, is the opinion of S. Guthman, head of the Atlanta Envelope Company.

"According to the Dry Goods Economist," stated Mr. Guthman, "fully 90 per cent of the products sold over department store counters are sold on account of appearance, performance or confidence in the store."

"Why shouldn't this be taken into consideration on envelopes as well?" continued Mr. Guthman, whose company manufactures more commercial envelopes than any other in this territory. "Why shouldn't envelopes be purchased on the basis of how well designed they are, how attractively printed, and how well they stand the test of the mails? As a matter of fact, business executives are buying their envelopes, more and more, on such a basis. That, coupled with a confidence in the manufacturing concern offering to supply the envelopes."

The growth of the Atlanta Envelope Company is an interesting chapter in southern industry. Founded in 1903, this institution has increased the scope of its activities, year by year, until its customers now are located in every part of the Union. Naturally it is in position to give the speediest possible service to customers in Atlanta and the state of Georgia. It is an every day occurrence for the Atlanta Envelope Company to manufacture special envelopes and deliver them to a customer before time has

STORAGE COMPANY'S BUSINESS IS ACTIVE

Harry Zaban, president of the Zaban Storage Company, reports that their business was extra good during the month of February, several long hauls being made with their large out-of-town vans, much local household and office moving having been done, and considerable shipping and packing being done from their Spring street warehouse and person's homes.

This progressive company has recently added some new power combination saws to cut all their lumber for packing household furniture and new merchandise, and having a force of experienced packers under a competent foreman, they quickly make ready for shipment the contents of a household, and guarantee there will be no loss from breakage of any articles they pack. Due to the facilities and rapidity with which they do this kind of work their charges for it are much slipped sufficient for the order to have even reached some eastern or mid-western envelope manufacturer.
